Mrs Tuck, No. 8 Avenue D, says she has been troubled with worms for more than a year, and that she took one bottle of Dr C McLane's Celebrated Vermifuge, prepared by Fleming Bros., which brought away from her over three hundred worms, big and little. She now believes herself to be entirely free from disease.

Messrs D & J W Colvin of Winchester, Ind., happened last spring to get some of Dr C McLane's Vermifuge. After using a few bottles, the demand became so great for it that their stock was soon exhausted. They say that it has produced the best effect ever experienced, and is very popular among the people.

Andrew Downing of Cranberry township, Venango county, Pa., gave his child one teaspoonful of Dr C McLane's Vermifuge and she passed 177 worms. Next morning, on repeating the dose, she passed 113 more.

Jonathan Houghman, of West Union, Park county, Iowa, writes that he is unable to supply the demand, as the people in his neighborhood say, after a trial of the others, that none is equal to Dr C McLane's Vermifuge.

SARATOGA, Nov 7.—Complete official returns give Blaine [illegible], Cleveland [illegible], Butler 9?, St John 12?.

ROCHESTER, Nov 7.—Orleans county complete: Blaine [illegible], Cleveland 2808, St John 6??, Butler 68.

TEN MORE DISTRICTS REPORTED.

NEW YORK, Nov 7.—Ten districts not heretofore reported all day just reached the Associated Press office, some of them coming from mountain regions in [illegible]. These foot up as follows: Blaine 66?, Cleveland 217; the republican plurality in these districts, 447.

REVISION OF FIGURES.

NEW YORK, Nov 7.—Revision of figures in Westchester county shows a clerical error in the associated press figures. The correction of this error gives Cleveland [illegible] more votes than the previous statement based on election districts. A difference of nearly 441 has been found in Cattaraugus county between the associated press figures and the returns of the county clerk. If the latter figures stand they will increase Blaine's plurality by 441.

NEW YORK, Nov 7.—Complete Associated Press returns by election districts from Cattaraugus county have been repeated by telegraph and show that the county clerk overstated Blaine's plurality by [illegible] and that the Associated Press returns from that county, on the first [illegible] thereof, were correct as first published. The discrepancy therefore does not disturb the figures first returned.

THE LATEST—CLEVELAND AHEAD.

NEW YORK, Nov 8—2 A M.—On a careful review of figures by districts, as furnished by agents of the Associated Press, corrected by returns received during the day, so as to bring the record down to this time, the total vote of the state stands: For Cleveland, 559,8??; Blaine, 5?8,4??; plurality for Cleveland, 1460. There are yet eighteen districts from which returns are still lacking or unreported. These in 1880 gave Garfield a plurality of 7??. The counties in which the lacking districts are situated are Essex, Madison, Saratoga, Sullivan and Ulster.

REPUBLICAN STATE COMMITTEE REPORT.

NEW YORK, Nov 7.—The republican state committee has issued the following:

"In view of the claims made as to the result of the election in New York, the republican state committee deem it their duty to announce that while the vote is very close, the returns and estimates from the most authentic sources justify the belief that the people of this state have cast a plurality in favor of the republican candidates. We have received copies of the official returns as filed in the several county clerks' offices in all except 11 counties. Besides this we have caused careful re-examination to be made of returns forwarded to our headquarters in New York and Kings counties from the remaining nine counties. We have procured direct information from the most reliable sources and feel justified in asserting with entire confidence that the state has gone republican. The result thus arrived at is confirmed by an entirely different investigation, based upon the returns collected directly from every election district in the state.

JAMES D WARREN, Chairman."

FROM DEMOCRATIC HEADQUARTERS.

HEADQUARTERS NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE,
No 11 W 24th St., N Y, Nov 7.

To the People of the United States: There can no longer be any question concerning the actual result of the presidential election. Grover Cleveland and Thomas A Hendricks have a majority of eighteen in the electoral college. It is not worth while for our adversaries to claim the electoral vote of the state of New York. It is absolutely certain the returns of the official election on the night of the 4th of November show a decisive plurality in the state for the electors supporting Cleveland and Hendricks. If any different or altered returns are now being prepared or are promulgated, they are corrupt falsifications of the records of the state of New York, and the men aiding or abetting the making of such reports are criminals. It is not expected that you will tamely submit to the machinations of such men. Let them understand that you will not recognize or tolerate such [illegible]. At noon to-morrow throughout the United States celebrate the actual election of Cleveland and Hendricks by firing national salutes. Meet to-morrow night throughout the country, and express your opinions in a manner that cannot be misunderstood. The men of New York are resolved not to submit to the gross outrage attempted to be perpetrated upon their rights, and will speak for themselves.

WILLIAM H BARNUM,
Chairman National Democratic Committee.
A. P. GORMAN,
Chairman National Executive Committee.

A CALL FOR FUNDS.

The national democratic committee has issued the following address: "The national democratic committee has taken very active measures to insure a fair and prompt return in all the delayed and doubtful districts. Counsel are employed to watch the official canvass, and arrangements are made to insure the transmission of correct news over the country. To meet the expense of this action, which is necessarily heavy, friends in various sections are starting subscriptions. Money will be thankfully received by the national committee, and any aid of this nature to assist in enforcing the popular will should, to be effective, be promptly rendered."

A REPLY.

NEW YORK, Nov 7.—The republican national committee deny "That Mr Blaine is coming to New York for a conference with them. They say they "have no means of determining the result in this state except the election district returns, and that they will only take such steps as may be necessary to protect the party's interests during the progress of the count and to this end counsel will appear before the county canvassing boards next Tuesday."

MEETING OF LAWYERS.

A number of prominent lawyers met at Fifth Avenue hotel last evening to take such action as seemed to them necessary to insure security and a fair canvass of the vote cast Tuesday. Among those present were ex-Secretary Benjamin H Bristow, Congressman A S Hewitt, James C Carter, president of the Peace association, ex-Governor Bedle of New Jersey, ex-Attorney General C S Fairchild, Francis Barlow, Governor [illegible], Frederick R Coudert, Wm C Whitney, W H Barnum, F [illegible] Stetson, District Attorney [illegible], [illegible] Alber, Stickney, W G Peckham and W [illegible]. Resolutions in accordance with the object of the meeting were adopted, and after Aaron J Vanderpoel, Carter, Bristow, Stetson, Coudert and Whitney had discussed the election laws, commissioners were appointed to take such action as they saw fit in relation to the vote of New York, Kings, Queens, Suffolk and Richmond counties.

REQUIRED TO SHOW CAUSE.

NEW YORK, Nov 7.—The supreme court to-day granted an order requiring the chief of the bureau of elections to show why he should not permit the committee of lawyers appointed at last night's meeting to inspect the election returns.

Later Mr O'Brien let the lawyers have access to the returns and the court dismissed the order to show cause. It is stated the grand jury has already found indictments for fraud at the election. Steps will also be taken to punish inspectors derelict in sending in their returns.

NEW YORK, Nov 7.—Rumors were current to-night that John J Davenport and John O'Brien had been arrested for alleged tampering with election returns. Mr O'Brien was seen later and found that he had been arrested. He said he understood he had been indicted by the grand jury, and expected to be taken into custody in a day or two. Davenport is United States commissioner. O'Brien is chairman of the republican county committee and chief of the bureau of elections.

TAKING PRECAUTIONS.

NEW YORK, Nov 7.—By orders of the acting superintendent of police, issued to-day, captains are required to hold their men in readiness for any outbreak that might occur. A large force of police officers is massed in the station house nearest the newspaper offices.

NEWSPAPER OPINION.

NEW YORK, Nov 7.—The Mail and Express says: Neither party yields New York state. The figures are so close that official figures may be necessary to determine the result. Returns so far received indicate an apparent plurality for Blaine.

NEW YORK, Nov 7.—The Tribune estimates that Blaine has a plurality in the state of 1000 votes.

The Times says returns from all but two counties show Cleveland has 1270 plurality.

The Sun's revised figures from 5? of 60 counties give Cleveland a plurality 120.

EXCITEMENT STILL CONTINUES.

NEW YORK, Nov 7.—The Herald and Sun have withdrawn their bulletin boards. At the World's bulletin board this morning the crowd was quite enthusiastic over the announced election of Cleveland and Hendricks. This increased when it was declared that Jay Gould had conceded the election to Cleveland and had sent a telegraphic dispatch to the governor congratulating him upon his election. Republicans continue firm, however, and still maintain that Blaine has carried the state.

SALUTE FIRED.

NEW YORK, Nov 7.—This morning a salute of [illegible] guns were fired in City Hall park by order of the leader of the county democracy in honor of Governor Cleveland's election to the presidency. The booming of guns drew a large crowd from the bulletin boards at the newspaper offices to the park. During the firing a portion of a wad from a gun struck a little newsboy named Jacob Simon, in the face, knocking him [illegible].

NO PARADES WITHOUT PERMITS.

NEW YORK, Nov 7.—Acting Superintendent [illegible] to-day sent messages to all police captains to prevent all parades not having a proper permit from the police, and to give an escort to all [illegible] had permits.

INVESTIGATING THE RETURNS.

NEW YORK, Nov 7.—Owing to the divergence of opinions as to the correctness and manner in which the returns from the state have been received and tabulated by the associated press, it has invited a committee from both the democratic and republican national and state committees and the newspapers of this city to visit the office this evening and examine its returns received direct from the various districts throughout the state, and also its method of tabulating them, and assist in retabulating them.

The Tribune still claims Blaine has carried the state. Printing house square, in front of its office, is packed with people. Returns received by associated press from four more districts will indicate that, if the vote received by districts is correct, Blaine's plurality in the state will be around 1?0, while the vote by counties, so far as received, will indicate a reversal of figures giving Cleveland about 1000.

An effort has been made to get the election districts in [illegible] separately. The footings of districts, as received at the Associated Press office, are correct. The only possibilities of an error is in returns having been incorrect at the first, or any favorable to Cleveland. The situation at 1 A M is this: Several errors have been discovered which, except as to the one in Westchester county, very nearly balance. The indications are growing stronger that the vote will be nearer even than any estimates have yet conceded. Many counties are yet to be revised, however, and the work will be slow and tedious. It is necessarily so, as in every case where a discrepancy is discovered or doubt is raised, an election district returns are inquired for, and at such an hour it is not always easy to secure these promptly.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS WAS HONEST.

NEW YORK, Nov 7.—[Special.]—The Times, Tribune and indirectly the World, renew the charges of complicity of Jay Gould in the erroneous returns furnished by the associated press. I am authorized to state that the method by which the returns from New York have been compiled has been the best that could have been devised, where the result was likely to be close, as is shown by the gradual subsidence of the claims put forth by the above cited journals to large majorities for Cleveland, and their adoption, within a day or two, of the more moderate figures and estimates of the associated press. Assuming that reasonably accurate work was done by its reporters in collecting returns from the inspectors' boards in the 2000 election districts of the interior of New York, the system by which these figures were transmitted, tabulated and furnished to the press could hardly have been better, and could not have been distorted to an improper use, or it may not with a possibility of eluding discovery more than twenty-four hours, and the errors which have been made were generally such as were incidental to the haste demanded in collecting and compiling returns, while the delay in getting figures was mainly from the crowded wires, the necessity of repeating messages when accuracy was challenged, and the frequent long distance from telegraph stations. Undoubtedly the agents of the Associated Press, who were sometimes partisan editors of both republican and democratic journals, have been led into inaccuracies. It is also true that some of the managers have sent out "too previous" statements, based on prospective gains, and it is a further fact that Western Union officers have had access to rooms in which returns were being handled and votes compiled. But independent and best informed newspaper agents here, who take news from the New York association for the press from all parts of the country, are disposed to regard all charges as extravagance of intense political excitement.

GOULD CONGRATULATES CLEVELAND.

NEW YORK, Nov 7.—Jay Gould this morning sent the following to Governor Cleveland:

"I heartily congratulate you on your election. All concede that your administration as governor has been wise and conservative, and in the larger field as president, I feel that you will do still better, and that the vast business interests of the country will be entirely safe in your hands."

CLAIMED BY BOTH SIDES.

NEW YORK, Nov 7.—The Post says: The adherents of Grover Cleveland may rest confident that this state has given him a plurality, and that he has a large majority in the electoral college.

Senator Gorman, chairman of the democratic national executive committee, has sent the following dispatch to national committeemen for each state:

"It is now conceded on all sides that Cleveland and Hendricks are elected. The plurality in the state of New York is not less than 1?00.

A. P. GORMAN,
Chairman Democratic National Committee."

The feeling about democratic headquarters was so confident as to Cleveland's election that the crowd dispersed at noontime.

The republican national committee said they had no news to-day. They still state that Blaine has carried the state, and is elected.

The Mail and Express prints the following:

AUGUSTA, Me., Nov [illegible]
To Chairman B. F. Jones of the republican national committee: I am convinced that there have been frauds committed in New York state. I believe that the honest vote of the state gives a republican plurality, and I ask the committee to see that we have a fair and honest count.
J. G. BLAINE.

JOHN KELLY'S OPINION.

NEW YORK, Nov 7.—The Star says: Hundreds of telegrams have been received from all over the country inquiring the views of Mr Kelly on the election, and especially asking his opinion on New York. In response to these inquiries Mr Kelly sent the following statement:

"The figures show a total vote for Cleveland and Blaine of 1,1??,??? and a plurality for Cleveland of 1100. The Albany Evening Journal decides this. I am of the opinion that the counties when canvassed by the board of supervisors Tuesday next, will show an increase even by Journal's figures. The national democratic committee's figures are 1?00 for Cleveland, and their statement is based on positive information. I have no doubt of Governor Cleveland's election, although the people will be kept in suspense till the official canvass can assure them of the result. The means taken to conceal the facts, by those having charge of the vote cast in several election districts of the state of New York, would indicate that efforts have been made to tamper with the returns, but the vigilance of the democratic national committee has prevented it. You can rely on these figures, as I have assurance that they are accurate, and that the state canvass will find them correct, or nearly so, and if there are reductions the number will not be sufficient to defeat Cleveland's election.

JOHN KELLY."

ALBANY JOURNAL.

ALBANY, N Y, Nov 7.—The Evening Journal (rep) concedes the election of Cleveland. It says: "There seems to be no longer a doubt that Governor Cleveland has been elected president. Every county has sent in its full vote, and after a careful verification the results assure Gov Cleveland a plurality of about 1000 in this state. The vote will not vary 200 on either side of the figures. New York gives Cleveland enough votes to elect him." The Journal has devoted all its energies toward securing another result, and it now reluctantly says that the election has been decided differently from its desires, because it believes that prompt recognition of the will of the majority is essential to the maintenance and preservation of American institutions. So long as the people of the United States have decided to transfer the federal administration to the democratic party, we are glad that the decision has been made in favor of the democrats from New York state.

CONGRATULATIONS POURING IN.

ALBANY, Nov 7.—Congratulatory dispatches have poured in upon the governor all morning. They come from every state in the union, and already several thousand have been received. Among the telegrams was one from Jay Gould, congratulating Gov Cleveland on his election. There was a constant stream of visitors in and out of the executive mansion all morning. Many ladies were among the callers. The governor bore his honors modestly. The excitement in the city has largely subsided. Republicans generally concede Cleveland's election. Many business and private houses are decorated, and the enthusiasm among the democrats is subdued, but intense. The "Jacksonians," one of the leading campaign clubs, will serenade President-elect Cleveland at the executive mansion this evening. On Monday night next, a monster celebration will be held, in which all the campaign clubs of Albany and vicinity will participate.

THE NEXT HOUSE.

NEW YORK, Nov 7.—The Herald gives the following as the complexion of the next house of representatives: Democrats 18?, republicans 1?3, people's party 2; democratic majority 4?.

NO TROUBLE OCCURS.

NEW YORK, Nov 7.—In Brooklyn late to-night police stopped political parades, fearing they might lead to trouble. In this city great crowds gathered to-night at the headquarters of the republican and democratic committees, but no returns were given out. There was an entire absence of the feverish feeling of last night in all parts of the city, the democrats being seemingly content with the proclamation that "the controversy is ended, and Cleveland is elected."

WILL HOLD A MASS MEETING.

NEW YORK, Nov 7.—The executive committees of the various Cleveland and Hendricks clubs resolved to hold a mass meeting of merchants and citizens to-morrow evening at the academy of music. The committee issued an address to the business men of the city, in which they say that "the election of Cleveland and Hendricks to the presidency and vice presidency of the United States is an assured fact. All can rejoice that the election is over, that our active business energies may be once more given to our regular business affairs." The following are among the gentlemen who have been invited to address the meeting Saturday night: Rev Henry Ward Beecher, Carl Schurz, Samuel J Randall, George William Curtis, Benjamin H Bristow and others.

A STARTLING ANNOUNCEMENT.

TROY, N Y, Nov 7.—A special from Hoosic Falls to the Telegram says the Butler vote there was all counted for Cleveland. The tickets were the same size and thickness. It is alleged by Butler managers here that the same was done elsewhere.

CALIFORNIA

[illegible] THE SAN FRANCISCO PAPERS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov 7.—One hundred and thirty-two precincts in this city give for Mayor—Bartlett, 20,585, Merry, 17,342. For sheriff—Hopkins, 11,507, Patterson, 13,5??, Connelly, 8,2??. The majority of the republicans on joint ballot in the legislature will probably not exceed 1?.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov 7.—San Francisco gives Blaine 2?,7??, Cleveland 20,768, with twelve precincts still to hear from.

Complete returns from nine counties, and partial returns from the remainder, give Blaine 7?,??, Cleveland 1?,5?7.

Latest returns place the legislature as follows: Senate, republicans 21, democrats 19; assembly, republicans 5?, democrats 21; republican majority on joint ballot, 40.

The vote for congressmen now stands: Carothers, rep, 10,201, Henley 10,085; Louttit, rep, 12,824, Sumner 12,370; Morrow, rep, 1?,1?8, Hastings 9093; Markham, rep, 11,431, Del Valle 10,605.

Figures to midnight show the following majorities: Carothers, republican, 5?2; Louttit, republican, 318; McKenna, republican, 188?; Morrow, republican, 4024; Felton, republican, 519; Markham, republican, 503.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov 7.—[Special.]—All the papers here conceded the election of Cleveland this morning. The Examiner parades a rooster at the top of each of its thirty-two columns, and its leader is an unalloyed burst of gush, in perfect harmony with the accompanying poultry display.

The Chronicle hints darkly of fraud, and hence points with pride to the California clean sweep.

The Call, with its usual spirit, says, in effect, that it is well Cleveland is elected and a pity that Blaine is beaten.

The Bulletin this afternoon says: "Cleveland will be a president of the New York pattern. The tendency of his state is toward the single money standard of gold, tariff for revenue only as the best means of obtaining ultimate free trade, modest protection to capital invested in corporations, or the absolute disregard of popular rights and the conservation of the money interest against all other interests. But Cleveland, although triumphant to-day, will not control majorities in congress. The republican party will stand solid for protection, and there are enough democrats like Samuel J. Randall of Pennsylvania to save the protective tariff. The entire west, to the Pacific coast, will insist that silver shall not be demonetized. The money and corporation question will not be settled this term. The republican defeat now will serve one good purpose. It will unite and consolidate the republican party, and the independents will find their place among free trade democrats, if their domineering ways will allow them to stay permanently anywhere."

SAN FRANCISCO STILL WILD.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov 7.—[Special.]—The city returns are not yet complete, but the count has progressed sufficiently to show even greater republican gains than were indicated by the early reports. The city treasurer will be a republican and the board of supervisors and school board will have decided republican majorities. It is doubtful, however, if the change will be of practical benefit, as it is simply turning over authority heretofore resting in Boss Buckley to Boss Higgins. The absurd demonstrations in progress at the date of last night's report were continued till 5 o'clock this morning, and are being repeated to-night. Since 6 o'clock the city has been in a state of uproar, and at midnight there is no cessation of the horrible din. Every third man on the street wears a small rooster, perched on the crown of his hat, and a good many enthusiasts carry live roosters about with them. Montgomery, Kearny and Market streets are filled with hooting paraders, and it looks as if the whole city had lost its head.

MICHIGAN

DETROIT, Nov 7.—The election in this state appears to favor the republican ticket by a small majority. The figures sent before are reduced somewhat. Congressmen are elected as before stated, with the exception of the Second district, which is now claimed by both parties, republicans claiming a majority of 46, and democrats of 84. The democratic state committee places the republican majority at about 1500.

The Free Press has reports from a large part of the state, including the upper peninsula, which is strongly republican, and states that its estimates indicate a small fusion majority, but it will take an official count to decide. They estimate the fusion vote for Cleveland at 162,000, and the fusion vote for Butler at 38,000. As in fusion it was agreed to divide the electoral vote proportionately to the popular vote, a fusion victory would give Cleveland 10, Butler 2, and Blaine 1 vote.

The state republican committee does not allow the claims of the fusionists, but still claims a majority of 7000 on the state and electoral tickets.

The Post (rep.) claims the state by 6000 to 7000 on figures received from correspondents in most counties of the state, with estimates on the remainder of the counties. Blaine's plurality is a little over 6000. It also claims to have 16 republicans out of 32 in the state senate, and half the representatives.

The prohibition vote has been estimated by the Free Press at about 20,000 for Preston for governor, and 17,000 for St. John.

DETROIT, Nov 7.—Figures sent to-day on the result in this state will be little changed by later returns. At midnight the Free Press (dem.), reports Blaine's plurality in 1128 precincts out of 1165 in the state at 3145, and Alger, for governor, 2473. The latest precincts show an average republican gain of 111. The Post, republican, with two counties estimated and nine others partially reported, claims a plurality on the electoral ticket of 5003. The congressional delegation stands seven fusionists and four republicans, a gain of one for the fusionists. The result was reached by a loss of two democrats and a gain of three. The legislature varies somewhat in claims, but there will be a fusion majority in both the senate and house.

MICHIGAN CONCEDED TO THE REPUBLICANS.

DETROIT, Nov 7.—A careful comparison of figures from both the democratic and republican sources show figures heretofore sent in by Associated press reports from this city as nearly correct. The democrats allow the republicans a plurality of about 1500 and the republicans claim a plurality of 7000. The state has gone republican according to comparison in this office by 4877. There is not a great deal of difference on state and national tickets, as at first thought.

ILLINOIS

CHICAGO, Nov 7.—There was much interest and at one time considerable excitement in the business portion of the city last night. Both parties claimed New York and went marching about the streets singing, blowing tin horns and cat calling. About midnight a collision occurred between persons standing on the street, looking at the bulletins of the Inter Ocean and Tribune. Several persons were hit with fists and sticks, but a call for the police was responded to quickly and the riot quelled before any one was seriously hurt. Latest returns to the Daily News indicate the election of ten republican congressmen, nine democrats and one doubtful. In the state legislature it says that on joint ballot the democrats will have 102, republicans 100, independent one, doubtful one.

EX-SPEAKER KEIFER INTERVIEWED.

CHICAGO, Nov 7.—Ex-Speaker Keifer, referring to the New York Sun's statement that the contest over the New York vote would throw the election of president in the house of representatives, said to-day that the vote of New York must be counted one way or the other. There was no precedent for throwing it out. In 1876 the votes of Louisiana and Florida were counted in, and whether New York went democratic or republican it could not be thrown out. The Sun claimed that if New York was thrown out, Cleveland would have 183 and Blaine 182 electoral votes, and neither having 201 the election would go to congress. In this event, Mr Keifer said Logan would be vice president, as the senate elected that officer. The ex-speaker had no idea, however, that any such result would come about. He had no hesitancy in saying the vote of New York would be counted, one way or the other.

NO MORE BULLETINS.

CHICAGO, Nov 7.—Mayor Harrison has issued a request to all newspapers of the city to cease issuing election bulletins, on the grounds that they are moving causes in collecting crowds and causing undue excitement. All have complied.

CHICAGO, Nov 7.—The News has reports from 97 of the 102 counties in the state, giving Blaine a plurality of 21,881. The five remaining counties in 1880 gave Garfield a net majority of 1410 over Hancock. Two of these counties, received by Associated Press, give Blaine a plurality of 102, making his plurality in 99 counties 21,983. These two counties in 1880 gave Garfield 40 majority. The three remaining counties gave Garfield 1370 majority.

CHICAGO, Nov 7.—With sixteen counties to hear from the Daily News reports the plurality of Oglesby, for governor, at 1178. The remaining sixteen gave Garfield 7381. The News, on these facts, estimates Oglesby's plurality at about 7000.

A number of republicans went in a body to the house of Postmaster Palmer and called out General Logan. He bowed his thanks but declined to make any remarks.

KANSAS

TOPEKA, Kan, Nov 7.—The excitement in this city the past forty-eight hours has been so intense over national politics that no efforts have been made by any one to complete the vote of this state. Newspaper men, committees and candidates have rested upon the assurance that the republican candidates for state offices had received about 40,000 majority, and Blaine over 40,000, and that the legislature and county officers are almost unanimously for that party. County canvassers over the state canvassed the vote to-day, and official results will all be in the secretary of state's office in two or three days, when the official vote will be given.

KANSAS CITY, Nov 7.—At Sterling, Kan, St. John was burned in effigy on the principal street of the town this evening.

OTTAWA, Kan, Nov 7.—Large crowds are on the street to-night. St John was burned in effigy.

INDIANA

GREAT INTEREST FELT.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov 7.—On the basis of the latest official returns reported, Indiana has given a democratic plurality of 5?00, and the democratic state central committee claims 7900 majority. The congressional delegation will stand republicans 4, democrats 10. The excitement over the result in Indiana ceased to-day, and all centers now upon news from New York. Bulletin boards have been surrounded all day, and the republicans were somewhat inclined to give up the contest, but many still pin their faith to success from an official count, and shouts for Blaine were almost as pronounced as those for Cleveland. Jubilant democrats have arranged for a jollification meeting to-morrow night, on which occasion the speakers will be Messrs. Hendricks, McDonald and Voorhees.

Governor Hendricks has received a great many congratulatory telegrams to-day, and has been busily engaged in receiving and entertaining callers, among whom were many republicans, personal friends. An Associated Press reporter found him this evening, in conversation with a number of politicians, Senator Voorhees among them. He was in an apparently happy frame of mind, expressing himself as satisfied that the democratic candidates had been elected. He had nothing, he said, to add to what had already been expressed by him for the past day or two, respecting the election.

The excitement of the last three nights is beginning to tell on the people, and the crowd on the street to-night is much smaller and less demonstrative. No bulletins are displayed anywhere, and affairs are beginning to resume their normal condition.

MAINE

WHAT BLAINE THINKS.

AUGUSTA, Nov 7—Blaine's friends and family were greatly astonished and annoyed by reports about his health which seemed to be current in some large cities. Blaine is in unusually robust health and excellent spirits. The democrats seem confident of the election of their ticket and to-night celebrated the victory. The address of Chairman Manning as to New York conflicts with all advices received by Blaine. Blaine said he had accepted the republican nomination as an honorable trust, confided to him without solicitation, and had, therefore, spared no time and no effort to secure success. He had full confidence that he had been fairly elected and he trusted every effort would now be made to vindicate the sacredness of the ballot.

"To quote my own sayings on an important occasion," added Mr Blaine, "any party in the United States can bear to be defeated, but no party will bear to be defrauded."

Mr Blaine freely expressed his judgment that a majority of the votes of New York had been cast for the republican electoral ticket. He thought the returns and comparisons with former votes clearly established this conclusion.

LEWISTON, Nov 7—The Journal's summary for 370 towns gives the following: Blaine 66,079, Cleveland 46,547, Butler 87[illegible], St. John 19[illegible], Blaine's plurality, 19,532.

BLAINE SAYS HE IS HONESTLY ELECTED.

AUGUSTA, Nov 7—Latest advices received here from New York are to the effect that the republican committees, state and national, after careful examination of the whole ground are satisfied that the state has gone for Blaine and Logan. They state that a correct count will show a small republican plurality, and that they have taken steps to establish the fact. Mr Blaine's residence was crowded all day. Many citizens from distant parts of the state are arriving, and interest in the result in New York is growing deeper every hour. This afternoon Blaine talked freely about the situation. He said to a distinguished citizen of Maine: "I feel entirely confident that the honest vote of New York, without change or manipulation will show a plurality for the republican electors of not less than 1500 votes. I do not speak idly, but from the most accurate data, carefully furnished me from the most competent sources."

Blaine added that the dispatch of Daniel Manning, published yesterday, contained the most arrogant and offensive threat to control the election returns in the interest of the democratic ticket ever made in any northern state, and equaled the worst bull-dozing proclamations ever issued in the south. He thought its effect would be to arouse the law-abiding citizens of New York, who cannot afford to have their state reduced to the level of lawlessness prevailing in South Carolina and Mississippi.

The gentleman asked Blaine if he felt much disappointed over the possible prospect of losing the presidency by such means, and Mr Blaine answered: "I do not feel so, in any personal sense, but profoundly so on account of the vast national interests depending upon the result. I feel great pride that no imputation of fraud has ever been seriously uttered against members of the republican party in any state or district. I do not believe the American people will accept a fraudulent result. The republicans have carried the northern states by more than 300,000 majority and they do not propose to have the leading state taken from them by fraud."

AUGUSTA, Ga., Nov 7—Patrick Walsh, member of the national democratic executive committee of Georgia, telegraphs John Kelly of New York: "I congratulate you on the full, fair and honest vote of Tammany, by which Tammany made Grover Cleveland president of the United States."

PENNSYLVANIA

THE NEWS AT PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov 7—Great crowds swarmed Chestnut street, between [illegible] and Broad streets, last night and eagerly scanned the bulletins of newspaper offices and political clubs. Although the excitement was intense and those assembled cheered wildly for their partisan favorites, there were no serious disturbances. An Associated press dispatch from New York was hailed by democrats with the wildest manifestation of delight. The chief of police issued orders for the prohibition of parades in masquerade and requesting political clubs and people to abstain from parading during the present exciting political situation and by keeping off the streets to-night as much as possible. The police force in the center of the city was largely increased.

THE EXCITEMENT IN PITTSBURG.

PITTSBURG, Nov 7—A proclamation was issued to-day by Chief of Police Braun, forbidding the posting of election bulletins and blowing of tin horns on the streets. This has had the effect of reducing the crowd materially, and the best order prevails. Pool rooms have also been closed until after the presidential contest has been settled, by order of Mayor Fulton, as betting is calculated to keep up the excitement and partisan feeling.

GEORGIA

SAVANNAH, Nov 7—There is intense excitement in the city. Such scenes have been unknown here since 1860. The city wore the appearance of a holiday. People gathered in groups discussing the great event of the election of Cleveland. Business men and clerks are on the streets. In many instances stores are closed. The people are wild with joy.

A GEORGIA YELL.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov 7—The city is celebrating Cleveland's election at 11 o'clock amidst the ringing of bells, firing of cannon and blowing of whistles. An immense crowd bearing banners, flags and red shirts on poles entered the capital, took the legislature by storm and adjourned that body. The crowd then took up Gov McDaniel and carried him across the street to the custom house, where the red shirts were burned and enthusiastic and patriotic speeches were made by Governor Daniel, Congressman Hardeman and General Lawton.

IOWA.

DES MOINES, Nov 7—The congressional delegation from Iowa will probably stand 7 republicans, 2 fusionists and 2 democrats.

DES MOINES, Nov 7—The following dispatch was sent to the national republican committee this morning, by the Iowa republican committee:

DES MOINES, IA., Nov 7.

The Republican National Committee of New York: Iowa republicans, believing with the national committee that Mr Blaine is fairly elected, are ready to protect the victory of their party in whatever way it becomes necessary. We believe, with Mr Blaine, that any party should be able to stand defeat, but a party worthy of success, as is the republican party, should not yield to fraud in the least degree, at whatever cost.

W. P. WOLF,
Chairman Republican State Committee.

LOUISIANA

NEW ORLEANS, Nov 7—The Times' specials from Morgan City, Berwick City and other points report great rejoicing over the news of Cleveland's election. Salutes were fired and the joy of the people seems beyond bounds.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov 7—Governor Kellogg charges his defeat in the third congressional district to corruption, violence and intimidation.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov 7—The democratic state central committee has issued an address, congratulating the people on the great victory gained by the democratic party, and the noble independent republicans who bravely put themselves into the thickest of the fight.

COLORADO

DENVER, Nov 7—The Republican state central committee estimate Blaine's majority at [illegible]000, congressman 3000, for the state ticket an average majority of 2500. The Democratic state central committee give no figures, but claim the above majorities are over-estimated.

DENVER, Nov 7—From authentic reports received from Silver plume to-night it is learned that the loss by yesterday's fire will not exceed $75,000. Insurance about $30,000. Twenty business houses were destroyed.

KENTUCKY

LOUISVILLE, Nov 7—Louisville has been taking things quietly and has been anxiously awaiting definite election returns, but to-night the city has gone mad over the democratic success. The Courier-Journal took the initiative in [illegible] rejoicing, and the city is now handsomely decorated with flags, bunting, etc. Old men and boys vie each other in celebrating, and the streets are filled with enthusiastic citizens, who rejoice and shout for democracy and reform. A mass ratification is called for Saturday.

VIRGINIA

RICHMOND, Nov 7—Returns, mostly official, from 84 counties and all cities of Virginia give a majority for Cleveland of 7450. The seventeen counties remaining to be heard from gave a democratic majority last year of 1270. These counties are likely to give the same if not a greater majority now, which will make Cleveland's majority in this state nearly 9000.

PETERSBURG, Nov 7—Senator Mahone does not concede the state to the democrats.

MISSOURI

ST LOUIS, Nov 7—Reported and in few cases the official majority from 76 counties in this state and St. Louis give Marmaduke, democrat, for governor, less than 8000 majority over Ford, fusion. The chairman and secretary of the democratic state committee claim that Marmaduke's majority in the state will be over 10,000 but the republicans here assert it will be less than 8000.

NEW JERSEY.

TRENTON, Nov 7—Full returns from every county in the state give Cleveland a plurality of 2510. The state senate is republican by one majority and house republican by 10 majority.

JERSEY CITY, NJ, Nov 7—The New Jersey state republican committee has received reports to-day from all counties in the state. They show a plurality of 2262 for Cleveland.

VIRGINIA.

RICHMOND, Nov 7—Richmond's enthusiasm continues unabated over Cleveland's certain election. The joyous excitement of the democratic population is unparalleled. Two hundred guns were fired. There has been but little business since yesterday.

French Prisons
New York Sun.

A law passed in 1875 made a radical change in the management of French prisons, and now all prisoners are required to be kept isolated from one another by day as well as by night. Criminals whose terms of sentence do not exceed one year are lodged in prisons belonging to the department in which they were convicted. The point most insisted on is a sufficient number of cells to keep those who might be innocent of the charge against them from coming in contact with the habitual criminals. The matter hung fire for a long time, but in 1880 co-operation of the government was finally secured, and the proposed reforms are now in process of execution.

GENERAL NEWS.

The President Issues a Thanksgiving Proclamation.

THE COMING PLENARY COUNCIL.

President Adams of the Union Pacific Makes a Statement—Troubles Caused by the Recent Elections—News Items.

WASHINGTON, Nov 7—The president has issued the following proclamation: "The season is nigh when it is yearly wont for this people to observe a day appointed for this purpose by the president, as an especial occasion for thanksgiving unto God. Now, therefore, in recognition of this hallowed custom, I, Chester A. Arthur, president of the United States, do hereby designate as such day of general thanksgiving Thursday, the 27th of this present November, and I do recommend that throughout the land the people ceasing from their accustomed occupations, do then keep holiday at their several homes and their several places of worship, and with heart and voice pay reverent acknowledgment to the Giver of all good for the countless blessings wherewith He has visited this nation."

THE PLENARY COUNCIL.

BALTIMORE, Nov 7—A conference of all the archbishops of the Catholic church of the United States, preliminary to opening the third plenary council on Monday next, was held last evening at the residence of Archbishop Gibbons. Apostolic delegate acts and degrees, formulated at a recent meeting of theologians of this city, being the principal work for the council, were placed before the archbishops and gone over in order to thoroughly familiarize them with the matters to be taken up in council. All archbishops will be present at the opening of the council on Sunday next. It will be an imposing service.

SUIT AGAINST THE STEWART ESTATE.

NEW YORK, Nov 7—In the United States circuit court to-day papers were filed in the suit of Alexander Stewart, a lunatic, by his guardian Benjamin F. Wheldon, against Henry Hilton for the sum of $200,000, which complainant alleges is due him as one of the heirs of A. T. Stewart. This is the second time complaint has been filed, the first bill having been dismissed because surety for security of costs was not forthcoming.

MISSIONARY WORK.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 7—The executive committee of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society of the Methodist Episcopal church, began business to-day with devotional exercises by Mrs. J. H. Creighton, Cincinnati.

A STRIKE COMPROMISED.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov 7—The street car drivers' strike has ended by a compromise. The men demanded $60 a month, and the compromise agrees to $55 for fifteen hours work a day. The former pay was $45.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Nov 7—California, fair weather; north Pacific coast, local rains and partly cloudy weather.

IN WALL STREET.

The Day Ends with a General and Sharp Advance—Quotations.

NEW YORK, Nov 7—Governments strong. At the opening of business this morning there was a pressure to sell stocks and prices declined ½ to 1½ per cent. Union Pacific fell off 1¼ to 47, St Paul ¾ to 73¾, Lackawanna ¾ to 100¼, Lake Shore ½ to 64⅞, Pacific Mail ¼ to 48⅛, and Western Union ¾ to 57⅜. Sales were generally credited to bear account, and a low market showed that the bear interest had been materially increased. Stocks were offered readily, and as the day advanced the temper of speculation became quite bullish. There were large purchases during the last hour of trading, and a sharp advance in prices was recorded. The advance from the lowest point of the day ranged from ½ to 1½ per cent. Pacific Mail rose 2⅛ to 51, Central Pacific 1 to 34, Northwestern 1¼ to 85, St. Paul 1½ to 75⅛, Lackawanna 2 to 102⅛, Lake Shore 1¼ to 66, New York Central 1⅞ to 85¾, Northern Pacific preferred 1⅛ to 42⅜, Union Pacific 2 to 49, and Western Union 1⅜ to 59.

At the close the market was very strong and on the advance, with the best figures of the day generally current. Lackawanna sold at 97½@98⅝, seller 60, when the regular price was 100⅜@100¼, Missouri Pacific 82½@82[illegible], @80, seller 60, when the regular price was 90⅜. Compared with last night closing, figures are ½ to 2 per cent. higher, except for Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, Missouri Pacific, Kansas and Texas, Oregon and Transcontinental and Texas Pacific, which are a fraction lower. Manitoba rose 2 per cent. to 82.

CRIMINAL CALENDAR.

A CROWD FIRED UPON.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 7—An Oberlin special to the Leader reports that last night, after receiving the report that Blaine was elected college students and citizens built a bonfire, discharged guns, fired anvils and had a jubilee, winding up by serenading prominent prohibitionists, including one professor, with tin pans, horns and other unmusical implements. In these rounds they paid a visit to the residence of Rev Mr Mills, a senior in the college and an ordained minister, who has been a conspicuous advocate of the cause of prohibition. The moment the charivari began in front of his house he fired four shots from a revolver into the crowd, one of which slightly wounded a student named Mitchell, piercing the edge of his ear and grazing the side of his head. Mills was arrested and put under $100 bail for trial to-morrow. The feeling against him is reported to be strong.

TROUBLE AMONG OHIO MINERS.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov 7—President Greene of the Columbus, Hocking Valley and Toledo railroad, has requested Governor Hoadly to order out the militia, on account of the burning of bridges in Hocking county. Sheriff McCarty of Hocking county to-day telegraphed the governor to order out troops. He says Murray City was attacked last night by 300 or 400 miners, who used tins filled with giant powder, with fuse attached, and some dynamite. The sheriff says he could manage Hocking county, if Perry and Athens counties are looked after. No trouble has been reported so far to-day. Governor Hoadly is in Cincinnati and the call has not been answered.

ROBBER KILLED.

LANCASTER, Pa., Nov 7—The store of L. C. Robinson, in Salisbury township, bordering on Welsh mountain, was robbed last night. The suspected persons were negroes connected with the Buzzard gang. Constable Bowman found the robbers—four in number. The men attempted to escape, and Bowman shot one of them—Jerry Green—fatally. John Boad, another of the party, was arrested and placed in jail in this city this evening.

MURDERED BY DEMOCRATS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7—A crowd of people were cheering last night in Brooklyn for Cleveland and Hendricks, when Patrick Bray, inspector of sewers, and Patrick Cunningham, a car driver, cheered for Blaine and Logan. They were set upon by the crowd, and both stabbed. Bray's wounds were fatal. No arrests were made.

RAILROAD NOTES.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS MAKES A STATEMENT.

NEW YORK, Nov 7—Charles Francis Adams, president of the Union Pacific railroad, has sent the following communication to Sidney Dillon, explaining the financial condition of the company: "During the months of July to September, inclusive, we received just $1,000,000 a month net, from Omaha. By net, I mean over and above Omaha draft. During October we received $1,450,000, and paid $150,000 on Omaha drafts, leaving us a net of $1,300,000 for the month. Between now and January 1, I expect to receive $2,000,000, $600,000 of which will be necessary to provide for coupons and maturing obligations which must be paid off. But I am confident we will have in these two months $1,500,000 net, to apply to the floating debt. I may overestimate these figures, but I do not think I do. The Pullman notes, given for our share in the contract, are reduced now to $160,000. The company owes us about $80,000. Meanwhile our accounts at Omaha are in a better condition than they have been for a long time. There are no arrears vouchers, and the auditor reports everything well paid up. The reduction in gross receipts the past month was largely due to the fact of changed methods of keeping accounts. Last year we credited ourselves with about $1[illegible]0,000, freight paid on coal used for our own locomotives. Of course we never received this money, and it went into subsequent expenses, and this year's system of charges is decreased in so much. During September, therefore, we practically received about $600,000 more in money than last year. I propose to come on to New York next week, and take hold of the floating debt. From this time forward the plan is to reduce it steadily, and by every means in our power, until it is extinguished."

REDUCING RAILROAD RATES.

NEW YORK, Nov 7—Kiernan's news agency states that the New York Central railroad has just reduced its rates to Chicago to $11. This gives the West Shore a differential rate of $1 50. West Shore tickets sell at $9 50, and brokers predict a greater reduction.

THE FIRE RECORD.

STEAMBOAT BURNED.

MADISON, Ind., Nov 7—The steamboat Fannie Freeze was burned to the water's edge at the wharf this evening. Fire caught from a torch igniting hay, 400 bales of which comprised her cargo. Flames went up through the roof in less than half a minute, obliging the passengers and crew to jump into the river to escape. The books, baggage of the crew, etc., are a total loss.

FAILURES.

FAILURES.

NEW YORK, Nov 7—Failures throughout the country during the past seven days are 2[illegible]0. There is a marked decrease over last week, when the total was 267, and that of the previous week 258. Decrease arises in New York city, New England and middle states.

GREAT VINTAGES OF FRANCE.

Some Interesting Facts About the Famous Brands of Claret.

This year's vintage, says Galignani's Messenger, promises to be exceptionally good both as regards quantity and quality. The season has been exactly similar to that of 1858, when the vintage was a fortnight earlier in consequence of the excessive heat which prevailed throughout the summer. The cuvée was one of the best remembered, both as regards red and white wines, the Chateau Yquem realizing 3500 francs, and later as much as 10,000 francs per cask. The tonneau, or cask, in the wine yard districts, consists of 900 liters (about 200 English gallons) and the pièce of 225.

The great red wines of Gironde are divided into five classes, and belong to wealthy members of the aristocracy. The Chateau Lafitte stands in the midst of extensive woods, its tower at the end of a terrace, overlooking the summits of the highest trees. It was in a chamber of this tower that the owner of the castle in 1794, M. de Pichard, was arrested, and from which he was dragged to Paris and executed. He was president of the parliament of Bordeaux. The present owners of the estate are MM. Alphonse, Gustave and Edmund de Rothschild. The Chateau-Lafitte is, like the Chateau Margaux, the Chateau Latour and the Chateau-Haut-Brion, a vineyard of the choicest brand. It produces on an annual average 200 casks, but costs the proprietor a yearly outlay of 100,000f. The Chateau-Latour is a large square building dating back to the commencement of the reign of Louis XIII. This estate belongs now to MM. de Flers, de Beaumont, de Granville and de Courtivron. Its annual production is ninety-six casks. The Chateau Margaux is more picturesquely situated. You suddenly notice it at the end of a long avenue of time-honored trees. Count Pillet-Will is the actual proprietor. The last of the premiers crus is known as the Chateau Haut-Brion, and it annually produces 130 casks of excellent wine.

Of the second-class brands there are sixteen, all of fine quality. They are headed by the Brane-Cantenac, with a production of 100 casks a year and the Rauzan-Gassies, formerly connected with the Rauzan-Segla. It is one of the oldest domains in the Bordeaux district. A curious anecdote is told of a squire named de Cassies, who on falling into disgrace at the court was sent into exile to his estate at Rauzan in 1530. He there discovered that his people had been cultivating some excellent wines. Returning almost immediately to Paris with two casks and 100 bottles of the wine, he offered some of his produce to the ladies and lords at the court. The latter called the attention of Francis I to it, and the monarch, after tasting the newly discovered nectar, no longer nursed the slightest ill-will toward his former ecuyer and took him back into his service. Rauzan-Gassies vintage amounts to sixty casks a year and that of the Rauzan-Segla estate to forty-five. The Lascombes vineyards produced twenty-five casks, but those of the Durfort-Vivens estate nearly fifty. In the Commune of St. Julien we find the estates of Leoville-Lascase (25 casks), Leoville-Puyfero (80), Leoville-Bartin (75), Gruand-Larose (60), and Gruand-Larose-Sarget (85). The Leoville estates, taken collectively, form one of the largest series of vineyards in the Medoc district, and adjoin the Chateau-Latour. The latter wine is sold only in bottles, and the genuine marks of the domain on its labels, corks, etc. The Chateau-Beaucaillou, a cœur de cru, is another St. Julien, with an annual production of 110 casks. In the district of Pauillac we come across the Pichon-Longueville estate, and the Mouton. Then come the Montrose and the Cos d'Estournel.

The third class brands, to the number of thirteen, include the Lagrange estate, the Palmer vintage, Mr. Barton's Langoa and the Don-Segur.

In the fourth class must be ranged the Talbot, Mme Heme Chateau-Bycheville, and the Lafour-Carnet, and finally in the fifth, numbering seventeen, the Pontet-Canet, owned by M. Herman Cruse, N. Johnston's Dauzac and M. Koenigswarter's Tetre.

As regards white wines the highest and best position is undoubtedly occupied by the Chateau Yquem, an old Sixteenth century manor in the possession of the heirs of the Marquis B. de Lur-Saluces. The wine from this estate is literally worth its weight in gold. The first class comprising nine estates, includes M. de P[illegible] Vigneau, and the Countess Duchatel's Peyraguey.

Much might also be said of wines of the Champagne and Burgundy class. At Reims and at Epernay the firm of Cliquot annually buy grapes to the value of 4,000,000 francs, Roederer coming next with purchases amounting to 3,000,000 francs, but these scarcely suffice to meet the consumption in Russia and Belgium alone.

Austrian Army Accomplishments
N. O. Times-Democrat.

Before the war it was quite fashionable for the young men of America to join the Austrian cavalry. This was not a step of disallegiance. It was a step towards education. A man only learned three things in the Austrian cavalry, but he learned those three things well. He learned to dance, ride and fence. In fact, the reason why the Americans are the best waltzers in the world is because the waltz was imported into this country from Vienna. The fair daughters of America learned their steps from the officers of the Austrian cavalry. The polka preceded the waltz, and the first time it was danced in New York, not more than forty years ago, the whole community was shocked. The participants in the measure were a foreigner and an American widow. The foreigner was the missing link, so to speak, in the evolution of the American round dance. The galop came later even than the waltz, and was brought over here by two young ladies who saw it danced for the first time in Baden-Baden. So we do take something from "furrin parts," after all.

A lady who was somewhat inclined to stand up for the rights of her sex was criticising an article in a newspaper. She stigmatized it as "making war upon women." "Surely," remarked a gentleman present, "there can be nothing wrong in making war upon women." The lady considered this remark unworthy of notice. "Because," added the gentleman, "making war upon women is simply laying siege to their hearts."—New York Star.

FOREIGN DISPATCHES.

Particulars of the Recent Storm in Canada.

DEATH OF HON HENRY FAWCETT.

France Again Alarmed Over the Cholera Epidemic—The Franco-Chinese Trouble—Old World Notes—Etc.

QUEBEC, Nov 6—The loss by the high tide last night is now estimated at $150,000. There will be another high tide to-night, but it is not expected to be as damaging as that of yesterday. Dispatches from various points along the St. Lawrence state that no such storm as that of last night has occurred for the past fifty years. So far no lives are reported lost. The Paspebiac fishery establishment, Robbins & Co. and Leboutiller Bros.' places are considerably damaged, and several fishing boats were lost. At Little Metasis houses along shore were carried off, also boats, fences, bridges, etc. The shore is strewn with debris and household effects. The suffering is intense from cold and hunger.

At Islet the damage is estimated at $75,000. All the shops in the village were flooded, and the wharves were more or less damaged. The pavement and the streets were flooded, and the village is in a dilapidated condition.

At Metane, Price Bros.' wharf was carried away and several persons were obliged to leave their houses. The damage is about $5,000.

Considerable damage was done at Tadousac, but it cannot be estimated at present.

At Trois Pistoles three yachts and a schooner were destroyed, a wharf was carried away and other damage done to the amount of $30,000.

Two ships which were seen off Kamouraska are missing. They may have lost their anchors or run from Quebec.

Two schooners at Brodypot broke their chains and went adrift.

At River Dulump the old wreck the Margaret M. was washed ashore and another schooner went ashore near there. The steamer Union had a very narrow escape from wrecking while lying at the wharf at Eboulement. The passengers were all landed at the commencement of the gale. The cargo was damaged by rolling and shipping of seas.

At Sandy Bar fourteen houses were carried away. Loss, about $20,000.

At Farther point the storm raged furiously during the night. Pilots of fifty years experience, who remained in the signal bureau all night, state that they never remember having seen and felt such storms. Waves mounted to a hight of fifty to sixty feet. At one time during the night they fully expected to be wiped out. To-day the water is still roaring and splashing. A party of boatmen was sent out with a pilot to board the steamship Lake Nepigon, on her way to Quebec, and returned minus two of their number who were washed overboard and not afterward seen.

THE RECENT STORM.

ST ANNE DES MONTS, Quebec, Nov 7—The storm of the 5th, which visited here, took much the shape of a cyclone. Fifteen houses were destroyed, a considerable quantity of wood which fishermen had in store was swept away, and fishing-boats were totally demolished, having drifted on the rocks. Several poor families who had stored their winter provisions in cellars have lost them. Roadways are destroyed by the floods, and bridges smashed up. At Notre du Portage, Quebec, the storm was felt very severely. Three houses were swept away, a small wharf was knocked over, and three miles of fencing was carried off.

RIOT AT MONTREAL.

MONTREAL, Nov 6—The celebrated ex-priest, Rev Father Chiniquy, lectured in Russell hall last night. The hall was packed, but the audience was mostly opponents. Outside the hall a mob of about 2000 gathered. The proceedings were constantly interrupted and soon after the lecture commenced his audience refused to let him proceed. Men stood on the seats and window sills howling derisively, and yelling whenever the speaker attempted to make himself heard. Lamps and benches were broken, and broken glass was soon scattered over the hall. A strong force of police attempted to clear the hall, which they finally accomplished. A few of Chiniquy's friends remained to protect him. The mob then commenced throwing stones through the windows, and a good deal of damage was done. Several people were injured. The lights were turned out and the mob fired at random, and threatened to kill Chiniquy. Carriages were summoned, and while the police beat back the crowd with batons Chiniquy and friends entered them, and rapidly drove off.

FATHER CHINIQUY AGAIN DISTURBED.

MONTREAL, Oct. 7—Rev Father Chiniquy preached last night in the Canning street Presbyterian church, and was again interrupted by a band of young men, apparently students. The excesses of the night before, however were not repeated, and the disturbance was confined to shouts and yells, interspersed with lively skirmishes with the police. The students, after they were expelled from the church, marched through the streets singing, and giving hideous yells in passing any Protestant church. Several leaders of the crowd were severely clubbed by the police and removed to the hospital. One arrest was made.

MOODY AT MONTREAL.

MONTREAL, Nov 6—D. L. Moody began a religious convention for Christian workers to-day, large crowds attending.

ENGLAND.

A COMPLIMENT TO THE UNITED STATES.

LONDON, Nov. 6—The steadiness of American securities on the stock exchange under election excitement, is a subject of comment by the press. The Pall Mall Gazette holds that "this steadiness is a striking illustration of the stability of democratic institutions. A similar crisis in any other country would convulse prices. A nation of fifty millions of people decides the fate of its government in a closely contested election, which is conducted with wild excitement from the shores of the Atlantic to the Pacific, with less effect upon the stock market than a report that King Alfonso had a cold in his head would affect the Spanish Bourse."

A REDISTRIBUTION SCHEME.

LONDON, Nov 6—Northcote and Salisbury, conservative leaders, are preparing a scheme of redistribution, to be submitted to parliament. It is reported their plan adheres to the principle of separation of urban from rural voters, and groups of small towns into single member constituencies. No towns will be entitled to district representation that have less than 10,000 inhabitants. The general tendency is to eliminate town influences from the country.

IN THE COMMONS.

LONDON, Nov 6—Henry Labouchere, radical member for Northampton, gave notice that he intended to make a motion providing for a change in the relation of the house of lords and the house of commons, so as to prevent the conservatives from impeding legislation. Gladstone moved the second reading of the franchise bill.

The commons, after debate upon the franchise bill, adjourned in respect to the memory of Postmaster General Fawcett. Eulogies were pronounced by Northcote and Hartington. Justin McCarthy, home ruler, in behalf of the Irish nation, paid an eloquent tribute to Fawcett.

THE ELECTION IN AMERICA.

LONDON, Nov 7—The announcement of the election of Governor Cleveland to the presidency of the United States is generally favorably received here. At the American exchange a daily register was opened for the informal registration of political opinions of visitors. The results to-day were as follows: Cleveland, 96, Blaine, 60.

DEATH OF HENRY FAWCETT.

LONDON, Nov 6—The Right Hon. Henry Fawcett, postmaster general, is dead.

Postmaster-General Fawcett had been ill at his residence in Cambridge since Sunday last, with pleurisy and pneumonia, and as was expected his illness resulted in death.

POSTMASTER GENERAL FAWCETT'S SUCCESSOR.

LONDON, Nov 7—Thomas Shaw, member of parliament from Halifax, who has before been mentioned in connection with the postal department, has been appointed successor to the late Postmaster General Fawcett.

FORTS REPAIRED.

LONDON, Nov 7—A dispatch from Foo Chow states that the Ki Pai forts have been repaired, guns mounted and torpedoes laid in the river, leaving a channel of only 100 feet in width. A return of the French fleet, however, is not anticipated.

TREATY WITH AFRICAN CHIEFS.

LONDON, Nov 7—British consul Hewitt has concluded treaties with the chiefs of west African tribes on the upper reaches of the Niger river, and extended the English protectorate.

GREAT INTEREST TAKEN.

LONDON, Oct. 7—This evening continued excitement is manifested in relation to the presidential election in the United States. The result is anxiously awaited.

LIVERPOOL GRAIN MARKET.

TRIAL OF TWO CANNIBALS.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—The trial for murder of Captain Dudley and the mate of the wrecked yacht Mignonette, for having killed the boy Parker to keep themselves alive, concluded to-day. The jury brought in a special verdict, finding the facts as stated, and referring the question of law as to whether murder had been committed to the supreme court. The verdict was coupled also with a recommendation to mercy. The prisoners were released on bail.

THE MARQUIS OF LONDONDERRY DEAD.

LONDON, Nov. 6—The Marquis of Londonderry is dead. His full name was George Henry Robert Charles William Vane Tempest.

THE FRANCHISE BILL.

LONDON, Nov 7—In the commons to-night the franchise bill was read the second time by a vote of 372 to 1[illegible]2.

LIVERPOOL GRAIN MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, Nov 6—Breadstuffs are quiet.

FRANCE.

THE CHOLERA EPIDEMIC.

PARIS, Nov 7—Reports of the reappearance of cholera have a depressing effect upon the bourse. Tourists are again leaving the country.

The prefect of police, at to-day's sitting of the Seine council, expressed the opinion that cholera would again speedily disappear, as only isolated cases are reported. Reports of cholera from midnight Thursday to 8 o'clock this evening show twenty-seven cases and seven deaths, including one death in the suburb of Toulon, three at Nantes and one at Oran.

DEATHS FROM CHOLERA.

PARIS, Nov 7—During 24 hours ending 4 o'clock P. M., Thursday, there were four deaths from cholera at St Antoine hospital in this city. At Teron hospital there were seven cases and three deaths occurred. From Wednesday morning until noon to-day there was a total of 41 cases and 13 deaths in Paris.

PARIS, Nov 7—Cholera here causes a scare. Many Americans are making arrangements to leave the city.

PARIS, Nov 7—The reappearance of cholera causes great alarm throughout Europe.

THE SENATORIAL REFORM BILL.

PARIS, Oct. 7—The senate has adopted three articles of the senatorial reform bill, providing for the election of 225 senators by departments and colonies, and 75 by the senate. The term of service is fixed at nine years, instead of life. Pretenders to the throne are declared ineligible to the senate.

THE PANAMA CANAL.

PARIS, Nov 7—The Suez Canal company will send a committee to Egypt, to examine and report upon the feasibility of widening the present canal, or whether necessity exists for building a second canal. De Lesseps and his son will accompany the committee.

THE WAR IN CHINA.

ENGLAND OFFERS TO MEDIATE.

PARIS, Nov 6—Prime Minister Ferry has announced to the Tonquin committee of the deputies that England has offered to mediate between China and France, but had not yet made any official overtures to the Chinese government. The Temps states that France is negotiating direct with China.

MORE REINFORCEMENTS FOR TONQUIN.

PARIS, Nov 7—The Tonquin committee of deputies has voted a credit for reinforcement of the French forces. The minister of war and marine intimated to the committee that if the conflict continued in Tonquin they would be obliged to ask for a further credit in December of 8,000,000 francs.

THE CONGO TERRITORY.

PARIS, Nov 7—Le Temps has announced that meetings will be held at the foreign office next week, to harmonize the views of France and those of the African Association upon the territorial limits of the Congo country.

GERMANY.

THE AFRICAN ASSOCIATION.

BERLIN, Nov 6—It is stated that Bismarck has entered into a secret agreement with France to propose to the forthcoming conference to recognize the African Association as a sovereign state of the Congo, and that under this agreement Germany will share with France the right to purchase territory of the association, if that organization should be dissolved. It is reported Earl Granville, British foreign secretary, has demanded an explanation of this matter.

WILL ADDRESS THE DELEGATES.

BERLIN, Nov. 7—The emperor will deliver an address of welcome to the delegates at the first sitting of the Congo conference.

New Anesthetic.
New York Tribune.

A student at the university of Heidelberg, in Germany, while experimenting recently with cocoa, made a tincture of hydro-chlorate of cocaine, which, to his amazement and surprise, he accidentally discovered that when applied to the surface of the eye would make it insensible to feeling. * * * The hydro-chlorate of cocaine is the active principle of cocoa, and is only made by one firm in Germany. It cannot be obtained in the drug stores in this country. An anesthetic that would render a particular part of the human body without sensation, and avoid the necessity of using chloroform or ether, which affect the whole body, has long been sought by the medical profession, and this new discovery will be thoroughly tested and experimented with, in the hope that it may be found to have an effect upon other portions of the body than the eye. This anesthetic has been used in a few cases within the past two weeks by one or two eminent oculists in this city. The material is costly at present, and, as it has not been made in this country, it will be some time before it will be cheap enough to be used in ordinary practice. It was used on Monday for the first time at the Mount Sinai hospital. A woman 60 years of age was admitted to the hospital last week who was totally blind. About two years ago she noticed a slight cloudiness at times in the right eye, which gradually increased until, at the end of the year, the sight was totally destroyed. The left eye became affected in a similar manner, with the same result. Her eyes being subjected to a bright light, an internal examination was made which revealed the presence of a hard, mature cataract in the capsule, or membrane, covering the lens in each eye. When the light was before her eyes she could distinguish it from darkness, but could not see any surrounding objects. * * * The operation upon both eyes was performed successfully, without the patient feeling the slightest sensation, and lasted about 20 minutes. The new anesthetic has done its work beautifully.

Instead of handkerchiefs the Japanese youth carry small packages of paper cut in diminutive squares, and after using a sheet throw it away. While this may be preferable to carrying around a large wad of silk or linen in the pocket, it must look very funny to see the youth of that country pull out a piece of paper to shake at a girl in a second-story window as he turns a neighboring corner.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST.

WESTERN OREGON.

Mr Pritchett, of Eugene City, was severely hurt last Sunday, by slipping while getting into a buggy, and in the fall breaking two ribs. Dr. Jones attended the injury.

EASTERN OREGON.

Last Tuesday night a dastardly incendiary fire and robbery was committed at Canyon City. While Samuel Sired and wife were absent some party entered their dwelling and stole several articles therefrom, and then set fire to the bed clothing. Sam returned to the house after something he needed and discovered the fire before it had made much headway, and in time to prevent its doing a great deal of damage.

A Canyon City paper says: We learn that the attacking party who shot the Indians at Long Creek, fired about 150 rounds into the Indian camp, cutting down their tent poles and riddling things generally. The only reason why there were not more Indians wounded is because they laid flat on the ground and the shots nearly all passed over them. One Indian was wounded in three places, and has probably died before this time.

A robbery near Granite, Grant county, is reported. A band of Indians were riding along when they met a Chinaman. They stopped him, and tying his arms around a tree behind his back, appropriated what money and other valuables he had about him and left. He remained in this position for some time, until found by a white man who chanced to be passing near and released him. The mongolian claims that they robbed him of about $[illegible]. Such acts as this do not speak well for our red friends, and if not checked they will soon be experimenting with settlers and sheep men who are at a distance from aid.

The Walla Walla Statesman says: Never before in the history of this country were the prospects of an immense harvest next year as good as now. The past year a more than usually large area of land was summer fallowed and only sowed the present fall. The fall rains and intervening warm weather is the cause and nothing can prevent the next harvest from being a most bountiful one.

Peck's Sun.

In Chicago depots it has got so that men look upon women with baskets and bundles with suspicion, and if a strange woman asks a man to hold her basket or bundle for a minute, the man turns pale and skips out of the depot so quick that the woman thinks he is crazy. Occasionally a stranger from the country will grant the request of a lady to take care of a bundle for a moment while she buys a ticket, but he very shortly finds that he is in possession of a baby, and that the woman has disappeared. There is nothing that is much more annoying to a sensitive man than to be sitting in a depot, and have a package left in his charge for a moment, and after the owner of the package has gone, to have the contents of the package begin to cry. A man thus surprised will turn pale, though his face may be naturally red or black. He will listen to that cry and feel that all the world believes him to be the father of the package and the more he tries to explain the singular circumstances, the more people will look at him as though he was a bad man. He looks around for the author of his misery, but the baby cries, and he has to attempt to soothe it. No man is constituted so as to stop the crying of a young babe, and all efforts are barren of results. To see a man that has had a baby left in his charge looking down into the basket and wishing he were dead, is a picture of sorrow that has only to be seen once to be remembered always. The man immediately wonders what he is going to do with it. He cannot leave it in the depot, because he would be accused of abandoning the child. He does not want to take it home with him. Few men are qualified with the proper amount of gall to come home from a journey to Chicago, bringing with them a baby. No matter how truthful a man may have been all his life, to go home with a baby in a basket and tell his wife that a strange woman left it on his hands, would cause doubt and suspicion in the minds of ninety-nine wives out of a hundred good women. They would suspicion that there was a certain resemblance existing between the baby and the basket carrier, whether there was or not. The hardest explanation a man is called upon to make in this world is how on earth it happened that an abandoned child fell to him. If a child is abandoned somebody has got to discover it, and it is as liable to be one man as another, but whoever it is, the wife will not believe that it is a mere accident. Years ago it was the practice of people who desired to dispose of babies to go into a passenger car and leave the baby on a seat, knowing that the good conductor would see that the little one did not suffer. It was considered quite a joke on conductors at first, when a baby was found on their trains, and the paper would allude to the incident in a pleasant manner, and the boys would call the conductors orphan asylums, and all that, but the business became monotonous after a while, and many good conductors got to turning pale when a woman entered a car with a basket. It is hard for a conductor to explain such a thing to his wife as it is for anybody, and conductors' wives are as apt to have suspicions as anybody's wives, and it was not strange that conductors who had reputations to maintain, and who desired peace in their families, got in the habit of sawing off much unclaimed baggage on to the brakemen and parlor car porters. The brakemen and porters rather liked the excitement and notoriety of being [illegible] for a time, but on a salary of sixty dollars a month a brakeman can't run many foundling homes, so they jumped the game, and children left in a car were for a long time either given to passengers who occupied the nearest seats or were turned over to the lost baggage department at the end of the run. This made the company responsible, and all well regulated railroads had to have an orphan asylum at some central point, which was expensive and caused [illegible] at the annual meetings of directors which were not complimentary to the managers. Whether railroad managers have an understanding with females who have babies that they do not want, or not, is not known, but certain it is babies are not now left in cars. The waiting rooms of depots catch about all the [illegible], and strangers in Chicago who are waiting for trains are very liable to have children left in their charge, so it might be well for travelers to go armed with nursing bottles, so that if they find that a baby has been given them for safe keeping they can at least feed the little one, and relieve suffering. Or a better scheme would be to have trainboys and news stands [illegible] keep rubber-nozzled nursing-bottles, as well as vegetable ivory and peanuts with the [illegible] thin from transportation in baskets. These children of misfortune must not be left to [illegible] all men should be prepared with the [illegible] give the poor little waif a warm meal. In addition to this, the railroad companies should have blank certificates to fill out for a man whose ticket draws a baby, testifying that he got it the way he tells his wife he did, and had it left on his hands. Such certificates would do much to restore confidence when a man brings home a strange baby.

SELLERS' GHOST.

John T. Raymond Haunted by His Own Great Character—The Bridge Story

St Louis Post-Dispatch.

"I'll match you for it." The "it" referred to in this sentence was a particularly toothsome-looking dish of sweetbreads in cases, a la Reine Royal, which a waiter had just opened on a table in the Southern hotel dining room, and the speaker was the eminent comedian, John T. Raymond. A Post-Dispatch reporter was lunching with Mr Raymond, and the waiter had by mistake brought one dish of sweetbreads instead of two. The comedian had one hand in his pocket and assumed an earnest expression and attitude that would have brought down the house. "By jingo, I forgot!" he exclaimed, "I have sworn off." Raymond's ruling passion, as every one knows who knows him, is to match No matter where he is or under what circumstances he is ready to match anything from a punched copper to a $20 gold piece. If he were on his death-bed, he would match nickels with the "Old Boy" for his immortal soul. "I'll tell you how I happened to swear off You know I am pretty much of a hand at matching, and sometimes I get started and never know when to stop Well, I was playing an engagement—I won t tell where it was, because it was announced that I was sick—and I was to appear for the last time one night I happened to drop into a friend's room in the afternoon, and before we knew it we were matching for dollars. The company didn't know where I was, and luck was against me, and I was so deeply engaged in the game that I forgot all about the performance It was nearly daylight before I came to, and perhaps there wasn't a racket at the theater! Why, it is a fact that I had and all the money I had about me It was time to stop. I took the company aside one by one and matched 'em once for a week's salary, and—"

"Won it?"

"Not by a blamed sight! Lost it."

In the course of a lunch, in which Raymond made a record on Mulligatawny soup, lobster a la Hollandaise, boiled halibut, spring chicken, sweetbreads, salads, pastry, desserts, and fruits, the reporter noticed that he did not touch a single vegetable. Remembering the gusto with which he tackled the turnips as Colonel Sellers, he was a little surprised at this, and took the liberty of commenting upon it.

"It is strange" said Mr Raymond, "but I can truthfully say that I never tasted a vegetable in my life. I don't know how a single vegetable in the whole list are usually served on the table tastes. I always did have an antipathy for them that I cannot get over I never could explain it and never could conquer it"

Mr. Raymond then branched off on the difficulty in the way of a man who has created a character and made a name in it attempting to change to something else

"Why, people think," he said, "that I never existed before Colonel Mulberry Sellers, and was born with my hand in the air I had played nearly all of the comedy characters before I ever heard of Sellers, but it clings to me like a ban It's the same with Joe Jefferson and Rip Van Winkle.

HE IS ALWAYS RIP

to the public, no matter what else he may be playing, and with what consummate art he may take the character We all have our peculiarities of gesture, action and modulation. Booth or any of them says 'to be, or not to be' this way," the comedian mimicked the tragedian, "and they all clap and cry out 'how grand!' Then, again, in 'Othello,' 'most potent, grave and reverend seigniors,' with exactly the same modulation and action, and it is 'how magnificent!' They don't say 'that is Booth or Hamlet,' but it is always 'Raymond is Raymond, or 'Egad, he is Sellers'" Why, in 'Fresh I strike out from the shoulder thus, exactly opposite from the Sellers' gesture, and its 'Egad, he can t help being Sellers.' If I should appear on the stage as a driveling old man, they would say 'It's just like Sellers. I tried 'My Son,' a very pathetic play, once, and I saw two men looking at my lithograph. I heard one of them say, 'We'll go and have a good laugh' I thought to myself, 'My boy, you'll be mistaken Well, the next day I saw the very same man standing before the picture, cursing it because they had gone to get a laugh and got a cry I took the play off. Why, in the great scene, when the old man says, 'I am getting down in the world, and looking around quickly in his garret says, 'No, I am getting up in the world,' the audience changed from tears to laughter at once And I never could get any one to understand that the change was intended, and I was only to illustrate the blending of the pathos in humor and of the intimate connection between tears and laughter. They persistently thought it was

SELLERS CROPPING OUT IN ME

By the way Twain and Howells are writing a new Sellers for me—a sort of continuation of the old one"

Mr Raymond also indulged in a few reminiscences of his trip to England, and discussed the English theatres and audiences

"The English are supposed to be cold, but they are not. They are just. They insist on getting what they want give them that and you can not find warmer or more enthusiastic audiences. Mary Anderson has had a wonderful success, and it made a lump rise in my throat to see the reception that Daly's company received; it was so enthusiastic. The English won't stand any flower work. An actor or a play stands on its merits with them Everything depends on the first night If you are timed, then you are gone There is no appeal from it. I knew my play was a failure at the end of the first act. They did not understand the hits in it. The mass of the people in England are

TOTALLY IGNORANT OF AMERICA

It's a blank wall to them. They know there is a New York and a Philadelphia, but whether New York is in Philadelphia or Philadelphia in New York, or both some other place, they don't know. The man who took the part of prosecuting attorney got himself a red shirt and a pair of top boots to wear, and I could hardly keep him from going on the stage in them They never saw a stove over there a grate is a stove to them, and when the door of my stove fell off, disclosing the candle inside, they wanted to know what the deuce I had a candle stuck in a box for, and then turnips are a luxury to them, and they thought Sellers was living—high when he was eating turnips I remember that some brute, when Laura was told that she had better go on the stage, shrieked, '—don't go on the stage, for God's sake!' and there was such a howl that we had to stop the performance for awhile. Nevertheless I like English audiences, because when they get what they like they are enthusiastic I see that bridge story of mine going the rounds, but not as it actually occurred. The fact of it is, to show the ignorance of most Englishmen about America, I went into an optician's on Bond street with James R. Osgood to buy a pair of glasses. An old gentleman waited on us, and while I was looking over the stock he asked if we were not Americans, which we confessed we were Then he went on to say that he had a daughter in Manitoba who he would like to see. He asked me how far it was from New York to Chicago I told him Then he asked how far it was from Chicago to Manitoba, and I told him. He was greatly astonished at the distance, and was shaking his head over the prospect of not seeing his daughter. He remarked, too, that he couldn't stand the sea voyage, as it made him sick 'Why,' said I, 'there is no need of a sea voyage, because they are building a bridge from New York to Liverpool.'

"'What?' said he, 'building a bridge across the sea?'

"'Yes,' said I. 'They had finished the first abutment when I left New York, and there will be no difficulty about the construction of it.' Osgood was having something like the cramps in one corner of the shop

"'It will take a long time to build it won t it?' he asked.

"'Oh, no,' I easily 'only about two or three years' and he really believed what I told him, and thanked me heartily for the information. Then, an Englishman asked me if we really had trees thirty feet in diameter in America. 'You mean, do you?' I answered

"'You don't mean to say that you have trees with bark thirty feet thick,' replied he in astonishment.

"'Oh, yes,' I said, 'that is a common sized tree with us.'

"I tried to disabuse his mind afterward but he would not have it. He preferred the [illegible]

COPENHAGEN'S LOSS.

The Total Destruction of the Christiansborg Castle, in the Danish Capital.

The Home of Royalty—Archives of Value—The King of Denmark at the Fire

Cor. London Times

The castle of Christiansborg is situated on an island surrounded by canals connected with the harbor and called the Slotsholm This island forms the oldest part of the Danish capital, and tradition relates that it was here Archbishop Absalon, 700 years ago, raised the small fortress in a village of fishermen's huts, from which grew up the hamlet of "Hain," soon developed into "Kjobenhavn," as the name has now been for five centuries, or "Gheapinghaven" as some English purists prefer to call it, instead of the mean ugliest form in which the name has passed into French and English From time immemorial a castle has occupied the center of this island, first a feudal fortress, with moats and walls and ponts-levis later on a royal palace with towers and courtyards, and finally, after a total destruction by fire, now ninety years ago, a large and heavy construction in the plain and ugly style, or rather no style, characteristic of the period of the empire Christiansborg castle was inhabited by the late King Frederick VII, whose equestrian statue in bronze adorns the public place in front of the principal entrance as if he were just coming out of the gates on horseback.

The present king has never lived there he has for his residence chosen one of the four symmetric palaces forming the square of Amalienborg but on state occasions the splendid apartments of the big castle, forming a flight of extraordinary magnificence and terminating in a gorgeous banquet hall, were thrown open Here it was that on visits of the prince and princess of Wales, the Empress of Russia or the King of Greece, the balls and evening parties took place and here the king received with royal hospitality the members of the numerous scientific congresses that have assembled in Copenhagen—last time on August 10—the International medical congress. The apartments were decorated with great splendor and contained many treasures of art and workmanship Among these the most famous was, perhaps, the basso-rilievo by Albert Thorwaldsen, representing Alexander's triumphal entry into Babylon but most of the larger rooms contained pictures and sculptures of high worth, besides costly vases and china, Italian mosaics, and other costly furniture In one of the wings, just under the banquet hall and separated from this only by an entresol, the two houses of the Rigsdag, the Folketing and the Landsthing were installed, each with a large hall for the public meetings and long suits of committee rooms, stenographers' rooms, printing offices, archives, etc The opposite wing contained the supreme court, and in the uppermost story the royal gallery of pictures This collection can, it is true, stand no comparison with the great galleries of London, Paris, Vienna, or St. Petersburg, but with all that it includes a large number of paintings by renowned artists, among them several real masterpieces, and in a separate division a representative museum of the Danish school of art from its first beginning until this day

THE CASTLE

It will be seen that Christiansborg proper included within its walls enough to make the huge pile extremely valuable But this is not all In immediate connection with the western wing was built a church, and just behind that, parallel to some outbuildings of the palace, riding school and stables, is situated the Thorwaldsen museum, that unique collection of all the works due to the pure and lofty genius of that marvelous sculptor who rests here himself in the midst of the marble gods his fancy brought into life. Si monumentum quaeris circumspice! The destruction of Thorwaldsen museum would have been more than a national loss—it would have been a universal calamity On the opposite side of the palace a long and low outer wing contained the royal privy archives, the collection of historic documents and state papers from the oldest times unto our days—an invaluable depository of information as to the history not only of Denmark, but also of Sweden and Norway Close to this again followed the great royal library with its 600,000 or 700,000 volumes of books, many of them exceedingly rare and costly, besides an incomparable collection of old manuscripts venerable codes and library treasures Very near to the castle indeed connected with it by a low building, extend the police departments the chancery building, as the complex of houses is called, a perfect maze of crowded rooms winding corridors with bewildering nets of chimney pipes, and closets filled with loads of musty paper The treasury department or ministry of finance has its vaults nearest to the palace and in them are kept many millions of ready money, besides the public funds of cash and other valuables Only the breadth of a street separates the departments from the exchange, a highly characteristic structure in Elizabethan style with a curious steeple formed by the spirally twisted tails of four dolphins Behind the privy archives and the royal library is the arsenal, in which are kept all the rifles, swords and military accoutrements of the entire Danish army It will be seen, in this way, that the island of Slotsholm, though forming a separate quarter of the town and of easy access from all sides keeps within its narrow limits a very valuable part of the capital's attractions and of the treasures of the nation A fire in any part of this conglomeration of buildings could not but be extremely dangerous to the whole From no starting point could the risk be greater than from the castle, because its lofty walls and inclined roofs rise so high that none of the engines could reach up to them, so that a fire when first fairly started could not expect to be controlled, and then only a miracle could save the smaller contiguous buildings from catching fire and going to destruction This miracle happened at the tremendous conflagration last night of which the telegraph has flashed the news all over the world The palace was entirely destroyed by the fire, but, owing to the almost absolute calm and a concourse of favorable circumstances, not only Thorwaldsen's museum, the privy archive, the royal library and the arsenal were saved, but in the few precious moments left before the flames spread to the wing of the picture gallery, most of the paintings, and nearly all those of real value, were carried off to a place of safety The same was the case with the very large treasure of silver service belonging to the court and hoarded up for many generations by splendor-loving kings

THE CONFLAGRATION

The first symptoms of something wrong were observed yesterday afternoon between 3 and 4 o'clock In some rooms of the entresol, occupied by stenographers and divers functionaries of the rigsdag, a particular smell had attracted notice, and on inspection it was discovered that some flues from a chimney that had been fired as a preparation for the coming session were on fire. It may be doubtful if even then a sufficient force of engines could have mastered the fire As it was, a couple of hours were lost in trying to discover the real point of danger and with attempts to extinguish the flames by the means of small stationary engines A little after 5 o'clock it became clear that the fire had for a long time—it may have been for days—worked itself on in the interstice between the entresol and the room above, the banquet hall, and even caught here under the wainscoting No in one spot, but in a score, first clouds of smoke and then leaping flames broke forth, and when the floor of the hall was cut open with axes, in order to get access to the fire the air thus admitted fanned the fine tongues into fierce flames In this moment the fate of that wing of the palace was sealed Higher and higher spread the conflagration; in a quarter of an hour it had reached to the upper stories and the roof, far above the height to which the few and old fashioned engines could send the water soon the beams and spars from end to end of the long extent were in a blaze, and it took not long before they crashed down in large sections, carrying with them the massive chimneys, that again crushed the floors down to the basement, and left nothing standing but the bare, dark walls, within which a crater was raging Some hopes were still entertained that the thick partition walls dividing the immense construction in four separate parts would prove strong enough to keep the fire within its present limits but the walls did not reach over the roof, and along this the flames spread with the most marvelous rapidity At 8 o'clock the front of the palace, with its heavy stone balcony behind massive columns, and with the four colossal statues by Thorwaldsen, were ablaze, and at 9 o'clock the wing containing the picture gallery was attacked so that all three wings of the palace—the fourth side, including the courtyard, is formed by a heavy colonnade not surmounted by buildings—were one continuous blaze These short hours had, however, been employed with the most commendable energy Voluntary bands of students and squads of soldiers had been at once put to work in order to save what could be saved, and in the excitement of the scene things were done that would have been deemed impossible under other circumstances

SAVING VALUABLE CONTENTS

Not only most of the paintings were saved, some in their frames and others without them, but many small works—even groups heavy enough to tax the strength of several scores of arms The archives of the rigsdag and of the supreme court were thrown out of the windows in the mud, hurried from there on wagons and carried away like rubbish in the utmost haste Owing to the direction taken by the conflagration and the feeble wind, there seemed to be no imminent danger to the royal library and the privy archive but quite differently situated was Thorwaldsen's museum. Happily this construction is only of a moderate height Firemen and sailors climbed up on the roof and spread thick carpets and tarpaulins kept wet by the engines, but as this was not thought to be protection enough, it was resolved to explode by dynamite a small pavilion connecting the palace with the church At 11 o'clock the order was given and a tremendous shock was heard all over the town The gap thus produced seemed to stop the flames At about 1 o'clock, after midnight, it seemed that the worst was over The firemen could certainly not be said to be masters of the conflagration, for they had nothing to do but to let it burn itself out between the thick walls, but it could reasonably be hoped that the fire could be kept within the limits it had then attained This proved to be so As this is written, on the evening of the 4th, the huge shell of the bare walls of the immense pile is still a confused sea of smoke and fire, but the other buildings have not been attacked The loss in money will be very considerable and many objects of high value are destroyed

A political consequence of the burning of the castle will be that the rigsdag must be adjourned It was to meet on Monday, the 6th inst., but now new places of meeting will have to be found for the two chambers.

That all Copenhagen was astir all night and that the town has been thrown into intense excitement is a fact on which there is no need to dwell It must be said that the populace behaved extremely well and that no mob, no gangs of criminals, tried to turn the disturbance to account. The king, who is still residing with the royal family at Bernstorff, some three or four mile from town, had just held a cabinet council and had invited the ministers to dinner The party had scarcely sat down at table when a telegram brought the sad news His majesty and the crown prince at once mounted and sped to Copenhagen. The king went through the royal apartments just before the fire reached them and had to be warned against dwelling any longer in the highly dangerous neighborhood As was to be expected, some lives are lost Three or four privates of the artillery were crushed by a falling roof, several firemen were severely hurt by burning timber and an officer of the royal navy had his face torn by splinters from the dynamite explosion

ABSENT MINDED PEOPLE

A Hotel Clerk Gossips About People who Forget.

Washington Star

"Can you—ah-er—can you tell me the number of my room?"

"Yes, sir—95"

"Ah! thank you—guess—ah—I'll go and get ready for dinner," and the absent-minded man lounged away towards the elevator The hotel clerk looked after the slowly-vanishing guest, and then turning to a Star reporter, who was standing near, said

"That man is a holy terror I've seen all kinds of men since I've been in this business, but he is the great original forgetter He has been here now for three days, and I have to watch him like a baby. I'll bet he'll either forget his way to his room, or when he gets there he won't know why he went there."

"What is he, a genius?" asked the reporter

"I suppose so he's an inventor and he don't know anything but cogs and wheels. He ate two breakfasts this morning, he ordered his lunch sent to his room yesterday, forgot about it, came down to the office, bought a New York paper and read until 5 P. M. He then came up to my desk and inquired calmly of me what it was he had asked for a little while before. I didn't know, and he could give me no idea, so I was in hot water until I questioned the waiters and found out about the lunch It's laughable to you, but it's not so funny for me, because if I don't take care of him he will surely attack the reputation of the house as soon as he gets away"

"Do you have many of those characters to look after?" inquired the listener

"Never had one like him, said the clerk "He's the worst, but we have a great many guests who exhibit signs of preoccupation Perhaps the commonest example of absent mindedness which I see is in regard to door keys. In the winter, when business is rushing, a dozen or more keys will have to be replaced every two days A guest going away will frequently forget to leave the key in the door of his room or at the desk, and will put it in his pocket so we have to replace it The house carpenter is about as good a locksmith as any in the city, he has had so many [illegible] to make. Then people leave articles of wearing apparel, books, memoranda, all sorts of things in the rooms when they vacate Well, if they registered correctly there is no difficulty in returning them their property, even if they forget to write for it but when a man registers carelessly or indefinitely it may sometimes be hard work to find him"

A FORGETFUL ENGLISHMAN

"There was an Englishman here last winter," continued the clerk "who deposited nearly £800 pounds in Bank of England notes with me. The next day he was called to New York by a telegram and having plenty of American money in his wallet, he hurried to the cars without paying his hotel bill, and never thought about his money or anything but his dispatch until he reached New York I have often seen careful people going over a written list and checking the articles off as they pack them away preparatory to continuing their journey We have more or less amusement with newly married couples as frequently the bridegroom forgets to write 'and wife' after his name. When he has to correct his error he always looks sheepish and his explanations are very lame"

THE ABSENT MINDED BRIDEGROOM

"A laughable incident happened here about a year ago," continued the clerk "One day in the early winter a tall, fine-looking gentleman registered as Dr John [illegible] and [illegible], from [illegible] one of the largest cities in the country. The doctor was on his bridal tour. He was about to turn away from the desk when he felt a slap on his back, and, looking up he saw the face of a college friend 'Hello Jim!' 'How are you Sam' and they began a rapid conversation when suddenly Sam saw the register and exclaimed 'Been getting married, I see! Well here are my congratulations. What's your wife's name?'

"'Jennie' responded the bridegroom

"'No, no I mean who was she' explained his friend

"'Why her name was Jennie—Jennie—oh, d——n it!' shouted the perplexed man

"'What Jennie O Damn?' was the laughing rejoinder

"'I've forgotten' at last exclaimed the bridegroom in despair 'Come up in the parlor, and I'll ask her what it was'

"Forgetting his wife's name," resumed the clerk "cost him a number of bottles of champagne.

"Oh, Lord, here he is again," he groaned and the absent minded man came up to inquire what time the train left for ——, for that place in Virginia you know, which the clerk interpreted to mean Richmond.

Count Rumford's Dietetics.

Popular Science Monthly for November.

In the formula for Rumford's soup given in my last, it is stated that the bread should not be cooked, but added just before serving the soup Like everything else in his practical programmes, this was prescribed with a philosophical reason His reason may have been fanciful sometimes but he never acted stupidly, as the vulgar majority of mankind usually do, when they blindly follow an established custom without knowing any reason for so doing, or even attempting to discover a reason

In his essay on "The Pleasures of Eating and of the Means that May be employed for Increasing it" he says "The pleasure enjoyed in eating depends first on the agreeableness of the taste of the food and secondly upon its power to affect the palate Now, here are many substances extremely cheap by which very agreeable tastes may be given to food particularly when the basis or nutritive substance of the food is tasteless and the effect of any kind of palatable solid food (of meat, for instance), upon the organs of the taste may be increased almost indefinitely by reducing the size of the particles of such food, and causing it to act upon the palate by a larger surface And if means be used to prevent its being swallowed too soon which may easily be done by mixing it with some hard and tasteless substance, such as crumbs of bread rendered hard by toasting, or anything else of that kind, by which long mastication is rendered necessary, the enjoyment of eating may be greatly increased or prolonged" It adds that "the idea of occupying a person a great while, and affording him much pleasure at the same time, in eating a small quantity of food, may appear ridiculous to some but those who consider the matter attentively will perceive that it is very important. It is, perhaps as much so as anything that can engage the attention of the philosopher."

HERO SCOUT.

Wild Frank's Thrilling Adventures in the West.

His Desperate Encounters on the Border Lands in Texas and His Adventures in Mexico

New York Star

While awaiting the arrival of the western-bound train, a few days ago, on the platform of the little depot in Toyah, Texas, a man of splendid physique, carelessly dressed armed to the teeth and mounted on a big blood bay horse, rode across the plain at a swinging gallop, and drew rein opposite where I was standing This horseman was "Wild Frank" Tower, an old friend and fellow-scout, and one of the best known, honest, most reckless, dare-devil rangers on the southwestern frontier Tower was born in Iowa, and when he came to Texas, fifteen years ago, was a boy of 17. He found employment at a cow rancho on the Pecos river, and the wild, rough life he led in camp and on the trail hardened his muscles, steadied his nerves and developed all those courageous qualities which distinguish the frontiersman He became a superb horseman and wonderfully skilled in the use of the six-shooter and Winchester The rancho adjoining the one where he was employed was owned by a man named Flanigan, a hot tempered, brutal fellow, brave as a lion, and the hero of many scrapes in which firearms had played an important part He had killed several men, and was feared and respected accordingly Wild Frank met Flanigan at a 'round up' They became involved in a quarrel over the ownership of a cow Tower was cool and polite but as firm in the maintenance of his rights as adamant. Flanigan, accustomed to ride down all opposition, applied an insulting epithet to the boy who dared to dispute with him, and, seizing his heavy riding-whip, sprang toward him

HIS FIRST BATTLE.

"I'll give you a hundred lashes, ye spindle-shanked puppy," he hissed.

The cowboys glanced at each other apprehensively, and Frank's friends, not daring to interfere, so much did they fear Flanigan, trembled for their companion's safety The object of the bully's wrath faced the ruffian coolly

"Don't touch me!" he cried, warningly but Flanigan, with a bitter oath sprang upon the boy and seizing him by the collar, was about to administer the threatened chastisement

Accounts differ as to how it all occurred There was a chorus of curses and loud cries, a fierce struggle the onlooker heard the swish of the quirt, and, through the cloud of dust that enveloped the combatants saw Flanigan writhing on the ground, while Frank, wielding the whip with a quick and heavy hand, rained blow after blow on the bully's head and face The sharp lash cut the flesh like a knife, and the blood streamed from many wounds, and mixing with choking dust, blinded the prostrate man's eyes. Several times he endeavored to regain his feet but he never succeeded, and when at last, weak from pain and loss of blood, he fainted Wild Frank threw the bloody whip to the ground, and mounting his horse rode away The whole affair had been so sudden and unexpected, and had resulted so differently from what the spectators imagined that the boy had disappeared behind a roll in the plain before the astonished cowboys recovered their senses. They raised the unconscious bully up, washed away the blood and poured whisky down his throat. He recovered sufficiently to be assisted back to his rancho, and when a week later, he was able to leave his bed, he swore a big oath and vowed to have Wild Frank's life Intelligence of Flanigan's purpose was brought to Frank He made no counter threat, but there was a peculiar gleam in his eyes which led his informant to believe that the boy would be ready

HE KILLS HIS ENEMY

About two weeks later at another rancho the two again met Both were mounted and drawing his Winchester from its scabbard Frank spurred his horse toward the bully and shouted

"Look out Flanigan!"

The ranchman raised his rifle with a wicked light in his smoldering eyes Both fired at the same time, and still pressing forward discharged their Winchesters in rapid succession Flanigan pitched from his saddle with three bullets in his body, and, satisfied that his enemy was dead, Wild Frank rode to the nearest ranger camp and surrendered to the commanding officer [illegible] on the frontier is a great influence in a court of law, and Wild Frank was acquitted The ranger captain then took a fancy to the [illegible] and urged him to become a recruit Accordingly he enlisted in B company of the frontier battalion [illegible] several years [illegible] Wild Frank [illegible] always in the front [illegible]

CONVENT IN MEXICO

When Frank left the ranger [illegible] he took a trip through Mexico and this was the beginning of his adventures in the land of the Montezumas He crossed the Rio Grande at Presidio del Norte and amused himself for four or five days hunting and fishing [illegible] were kind and hospitable [illegible] sky became overcast, and when toward nightfall a storm burst he sought shelter at a rancho [illegible] to the massive gate of the corral, and it was not until he had pounded vigorously on the barrier with the butt of his quirt and called loudly several times that the door opened and a wrinkled old Mexican woman appeared in the threshold [illegible] in Spanish but before the hag could reply a tall [illegible] American, pushed her aside and began to question the stranger Frank's answers were evidently satisfactory to the ranchero bade him enter and a peon [illegible] the horse and turned the animal loose to graze Frank's host provided him with a change of clothing—his was wet—and after supper conducted him to a room When the door opened a young and beautiful girl rose and faced the two men inquiringly The ranchero addressed her

"This stranger will camp with us Eleanor" he said "He will occupy this room You can sleep with Dolores"

The girl bowed, and, gathering up some fancy needlework upon which she had been engaged, left the room

"She's my daughter" said the stern visaged ranchero when they were alone

"ELEANOR"

When Frank finally retired from the room he closed the door It had no lock and, placing his six-shooter under his pillow, he threw himself upon the bed without undressing The anomaly of a beautiful and accomplished girl being the voluntary resident of a miserable ranch house and acknowledged as a daughter by so villainous a looking man as his host excited Frank's suspicions and he examined the room carefully to discover some clue to the identity of the fair stranger The room was comfortably, almost luxuriously furnished, and the books which filled the shelves of a hanging closet and were scattered about the room, the pictures on the walls and the general air of refinement convinced him that the girl was far above the average ranchman's daughter in education He looked through the books and searched every bit of paper in the room, but without finding a clue to the mysterious Eleanor's identity. Still thinking of her and her strange surroundings Frank fell asleep to be aroused by some one gently shaking him He started up and discovered by the dim light of a taper that she bore that his visitor was the beautiful Eleanor He attempted to speak but she signed to him to be silent and whispered the words

"Follow me"

Buckling on his six-shooter belt Frank followed her from the room and she led the way through several narrow entries to the yard His horse stood ready saddled and bridled just outside the corral gate The girl pointed to the [illegible] animal

"You are an American," she said "Your life will not be safe here"

THE FEMALE BANDIT

She pointed again to the horse and retreated into the house After a moment's hesitation Frank mounted his animal and rode away Day was just dawning He made inquiries about the rancho people he had just quitted, but could learn nothing concerning them A few months thereafter while at Saltillo, he strolled by the walls of a rich convent one evening The heavy gate swung open, and two sisters of the order came out They started at sight of the stranger, and Frank uttered an exclamation of surprise One of the nuns was the beautiful Eleanor, who had so mysteriously assisted him to leave the old rancho house

"Eleanor!" he said, and started toward her The nun shook her head and laid her finger on her lips as a sign of silence The scout drew back, the two nuns passed and he saw them no more The next morning the citizens of Saltillo were horrified and excited The nunnery of Saint Dolores had been robbed of valuable plate and jewels, and it was presumed the vandals were led by the celebrated female bandit, El Chiquita who had a hiding place in the mountains toward the Rio Grande, and it was the terror of all the country The latter woman had entered the convent in the guise of a pious novitiate had learned the secrets of the convent and at the first favorable moment admitted her confederates, who had robbed the nunnery of all its valuable treasure, and escaped safely with their booty They described the false nun, "and," concluded Frank, as he told me the story "will you believe it, the description exactly tallied with Eleanor She was captured by the rurals about three months thereafter, and I was on the plaza when she was shot. She died without making a confession, and no one knew who she was or whence she came from Her career had been wilder than the most exaggerated romance She was reported to be wholly devoid of mercy, but she did me a good turn, and—well, she was an American, and I felt sorry for her"

Mrs. Bowers in "La Charbonniere"

PHILADELPHIA, Oct 20—A notable theatrical production here to-night was "La Charbonniere" which was presented at the Chestnut Street theater under the management of Brooks & Dickson. It is a melodrama of the French school, having been written by MM Decourcelle and Cremieux and produced with great success last spring in Paris The interest on the occasion to-night was doubly enhanced by the reappearance of Mrs. D P Bowers, who has been absent from the stage for three years. She was most enthusiastically received by an audience that filled the beautiful theatre She does not seem to have lost any of her old time fire and her acting all the way through was warmly applauded.

"La Charbonniere" is in six acts, the first one being in the nature of a prologue The interest grows in the second act and the curtain goes down on a very strong scene The fourth and fifth acts are full of good situations, Mrs Bowers doing her best work in the latter, In the fourth act there is a very powerful scene, in which she and Mr Cowper, who plays the leading male part, are principal persons The play will certainly be a success. It may be improved in some important particulars, mainly in the cutting of the dialogue, which is sometimes tedious. The greatest praise is due Messrs Brooks & Dickson for the superb manner in which they have put "La Charbonniere" on the stage. The scenery throughout was especially prepared for this production and has rarely been surpassed The stage setting for every act was an artistic study and elicited loud applause from the audience

A MISTAKE AND ITS FRUITS

There is little reason to doubt that the republican party is defeated. So close is the contest that a long time has been required to ascertain the result, and we cannot have it yet with the definiteness we could wish. If the result shall prove to be as we now think it—if the republican party is to go out of power,—it goes not through misconduct in its administration of the government, but through mismanagement on the part of its masses in the nomination of a candidate. Without aid from the republicans the democratic party never could win a national victory. That party is deeply distrusted, its history is against it, and the republicans who have voted to put it into power have done so with many misgivings as to the experiment.

The republican party has been sacrificed by a mistake, of which many foresaw the danger and feared the consequences. In the selection of candidates "availability" is not to be despised. It was perfectly manifest to all persons of clear perception and sufficient information that Mr Blaine was the least "available" of men. There was fatal weakness in his positive strength. The case is like that of Henry Clay forty years ago. But so strong is the republican party in its history and achievements that only its own mistake could have worsted it.

Of men who would have made "available" candidates, in the best sense of the term, there was no lack. Perhaps the most judicious choice would have been Senator Sherman of Ohio. He is a man of eminent abilities and large experience, he is quiet, conservative, safe and popular. He would have carried Ohio in October by a great majority, and would have had the solid support of the great business classes of New York and the entire country; an earnest republican he would have drawn out the whole republican vote and would have held the independents who have rejected Blaine; his career has been so open, so honorable, so clear as to defy attack; his nomination would have awakened no rivalries nor jealousies, and he would have carried every northern state. But there was an insanity in the republican masses that called for the nomination of Blaine and flouted and scouted those who attempted to show that his career had been such as to make it impossible that he should receive the united republican vote. His quarrel with the New York "stalwarts" was one of the causes that led to his defeat. Garfield carried Oneida county, where Conkling lives, by 1946 majority; Blaine carries it by only 28. As Cleveland's majority is but 1000 or less, the dullest person can now see to what consequence the infatuation that demanded Blaine and insulted those who counseled disinterestedly against his nomination, has led.

One of the qualities necessary to success in politics as in all other affairs is prudence, the joint product of information and of careful judgment. Last spring when THE OREGONIAN gave its counsel against the nomination of Mr Blaine and presented in support of it the very reasons which now appear so clearly in the result, its editor was spoken of sneeringly by not a few upstarts, who declared that "Blaine must have snubbed him somewhere," and that this was "the secret of his opposition to Blaine's nomination." That Blaine was the strongest man for the Pacific states whom the republicans could nominate this journal did not question; and the returns of the election prove it. No other man could have won California by so large a majority. Probably no other republican would have done so well in Oregon, or carried Nevada at all. But it was apparent that the election was to be decided in New York, and that there was no judgment in nominating the man who would be protested there. THE OREGONIAN deeply regrets the result. It has looked upon the republican party as on the whole the country's most efficient agent of good government, and feels that its reverse was the consequence of a supercilious ignorance that spurned prudent counsel and disabled sound judgment. It now leaves to those who were actuated by this supercilious ignorance the task of chanting the refrain: It might have been.

THE OREGONIAN doesn't "give up the election," because it has no election to give up. It is a newspaper and desires to publish correct information. On the basis of its telegrams it is forced to the conclusion that Cleveland has a small plurality in New York, and is therefore elected. No newspaper, if it credits the evidence before it, can afford to palter with a matter of this kind. The republican committees still claim that Blaine is elected, but they furnish no satisfactory statement. The weight of evidence is decidedly in favor of the claim that Cleveland has a plurality. Should it turn out otherwise on the official count there would be a result which, as greatly as we desire, we do not expect. And, moreover, should it still turn out that there is a plurality for the Blaine electors, the above remarks as to the utter want of judgment evinced in the nomination of Blaine would be a whit less apposite and true.

THE PIVOTAL STATE

In what has proved to be the most important factor in the problem the estimates of the newspapers on both sides, and of sober minded men generally, have turned out to have been correct. New York was the pivotal state, and no one could tell before the votes were counted how it would go. The keenest politicians, when uttering their honest opinions, confessed that the silent, unknown vote of that state was an indeterminate quantity so large that no confident estimate could be made respecting the result. In presidential elections New York has been a doubtful state for more than the years that the republican party has existed, and it has been growing more uncertain every four years since the Freemont campaign. Freemont had a plurality of 80,000, but a minority of more than 40,000. Lincoln, the first time, a plurality of 50,000, but the second time a majority of less than 7000. In 1868 the democrats carried the state by a majority of 18,000. In 1872 Grant had a plurality of 53,000. Then the majority swung to the other side, Tilden receiving nearly 33,000, and in 1880 a change of 34,000 votes gave the state to Garfield by a plurality of 21,000. In seven presidential elections before this one New York went republican five times, but of the last four majorities two were democratic. The state was very doubtful before the candidates of either party were nominated this year, and the doubt was vastly increased by the character of the nominations on both sides. In view of the situation, therefore, it must be admitted that both parties took an extraordinary risk when they nominated the men who were regarded by the most dispassionate observers as most likely, of all the candidates before the conventions, to make an exhibition of unknown strength in their respective parties in the pivotal state. The nomination of both Blaine and Cleveland was made not only in opposition to powerful protests, but in defiance of protest. The opponents of Mr Blaine and the opponents of Mr Cleveland were alike treated with open scorn and the loyal party men on both sides among the protestants were compelled to give such an unwilling support to nominations regularly made as in thousands of cases amounted to the following of a forlorn hope. The doubt which has harassed the country and the extremely narrow escape of the successful candidate [illegible] should impress upon the [illegible] have flaunted candidates [illegible] country, one important lesson [illegible] expediency, no less than sincerity [illegible] of forcing candidates upon the people against [illegible] determined and reasonable protest. If the consciences of voters are not to be regarded, some respect must be paid to their votes. There is another lesson shown by the result, of importance to political managers and full of encouragement to the people—that it is safer to defy the worst elements of a party than to defy the best.

China is buying large quantities of munitions of war in Europe and America. If she could only give out a large contract for furnishing courage to her armies, the war would assume a serious complexion for France.

ADVICE TO YOUNG MEN

It is estimated that Minnesota has this year raised 47,000,000 bushels of wheat, which commands an average of sixty-three cents in Minneapolis and St Paul. The net average cost of a bushel of wheat on the small farms and the larger and more favored farms of the Red river valley is estimated at forty-eight cents. The average freight rates for hauling wheat from points two hundred miles west or north of the market cities is twelve cents per bushel, to which must be added three cents more for elevator and other handling charges, thus bringing the average cost of wheat up to sixty-three cents, or just the price paid for the No 2 grade, to which the bulk of the product belongs. With the cheap freight between the Missouri river and the Atlantic coast, the Philadelphia Times says that "twelve cents for transporting sixty pounds of freight an average distance of two hundred miles is surely an exorbitant one, which shows how thoroughly competition has reduced freight charges to a reasonable minimum." But, "no marked reduction in freight charges can be expected until active competition shall bring it, while the decline in the foreign demand for our wheat is not likely to raise the price to such a figure as shall make it the profitable business of former days."

The Times, therefore, concludes that "so far as the wheat growing region is concerned this appears to be a very good time to say to the young men 'Don't go west.'" This may be very good advice. It accords with what THE OREGONIAN has many times said about the wheat business, and it applies as well to this state as to Minnesota. There is this difference, however, in favor of Oregon. The climate and soil of this state admits of much greater variety of agriculture than those of Minnesota. The climate alone offers immensely superior inducements to immigrants. Mr Haldeman, the proprietor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, who visited this state a year ago, said that when the mildness and salubrity of our climate were fully understood, a great many people would come here to live for that reason alone. He said that people who had always lived in the cold and severe climate of the northern tier of states did not appreciate the advantages of such a climate as this, and, therefore, he was surprised that we did not magnify its excellences more, instead of virtually admitting that it was extremely wet by our jokes about "webfeet." Living as he does, in an exceptionally fine climate for agriculture as well as for health and the enjoyment of life in the open air, Mr Haldeman was able to speak with intelligence and authority respecting the climate of western Oregon, which resembles that of Louisville except that it is not so hot in summer and therefore more agreeable. Justice Miller of the supreme court felicitated the people of Portland on the occasion of his last visit here during the past summer on the great comfort of living in such a climate. Therefore we say to all who are seeking new homes, where they can raise everything they require for comfortable living and something besides wheat to sell, and have a mild and beautiful climate that Oregon still offers inducements superior to those of any western state. The people who came here first and have been here the longest like the country as an abiding place best. There are opportunities here to do many things more profitable than raising wheat. There is no state or territory which is capable of sustaining such a diversified agriculture and offers so many opportunities for manufactures, which, has at the same time, so fine a climate as Oregon. So far as the opportunities of establishing pleasant homes in a land of plenty and comfort it is a very good time to say to the young men: If you are going west don't stop before you get to Oregon.

A CATHOLIC COUNCIL

A council of Catholic prelates is about to sit in Baltimore which will attract much attention on the part of Protestants as well as on the part of adherents of Rome. It will be remembered that the date of the council was deferred from October, 1883, until after the presidential election, owing, it was surmised by certain Protestants, to the rumors that the chief purpose of the conference was to be the consideration of methods for the extension of the political power of the pope in America. The assemblage of all the archbishops, bishops, heads of religious houses, abbots, principals of church colleges and chief men of the religious orders of the Roman Catholic church in the United States will afford an impressive evidence of the growth of the church of Rome in the new world. It is believed that the Vatican reckons a population of nearly 10,000,000 in this country as in allegiance to the pope, and the increase by birth and immigration is still very rapid. A more thorough organization is necessary for the proper administration of the affairs of so vast a denomination, and the work of the approaching council will be scrutinized very closely by intelligent people of all classes. The last plenary council was held in Baltimore in 1866, and the contrast between the Roman Catholic church in the United States as it was then and it is now is astonishing. Archbishop Gibbons will this month preside over one of the most remarkable of recent ecclesiastical assemblies, and although the proceedings will be secret, doubtless enough will be disclosed to give observers a suggestion of the future policy of the Vatican in America. An absurd hatred of the Catholic church, once very prevalent, gave currency and credit to the assertion that the church was hostile to republican institutions. Fortunately this prejudice and hatred are now fast wearing out.

The peace of Europe means much more than rest from war. It means the continuance of the present agitation among the people for reforms of governmental abuses, and extension of popular liberty. The essentially peaceful rule of Gladstone in England has afforded the opportunity for a movement of the people in favor of an extended franchise. The present temper of Bismarck's administration is also essentially peaceful, and peace arises there the hum of discussion, in which the strongest notes are those of pronounced radicals and seekers for a new political regime. In Norway and Sweden, where peace is a garment never laid aside, there is steady progress in wearing away forms and traditions incompatible with popular rule. The Belgians have in their midst a party composed of men like M Paul Janson, who has just triumphed in the Brussels municipal election, who is pledged to universal suffrage. Similar conditions prevail in Portugal, where a change in the electorate is probable. But the reverse is true in France, where M. Ferry's plans for foreign conquest seem to stifle all thought of reform in electoral matters. The continuance of peace, where free thought and free discussion are permitted, will hasten the time when the barriers against all forms of tyranny will be broken down. Monarchies are sustained not merely by the force of arms, but by the diversion of the minds of the people from their oppressions by means of wars and schemes of foreign conquest.

It is an unpleasant thing to realize suddenly that you have been on the wrong side of all political questions during twenty five years: to find it a mistake to have prevented the spread of slavery and finally to have abolished it; to have quelled the rebellion, restored the union, adopted the constitutional amendments, extended civil rights to millions of people, protected the public credit, and done all the things which an opposing party has striven to prevent or defeat. It brings you up with a round turn when you find you were all wrong during all this time, and sets you to thinking whether political amnesty will ever reach you, or whether you will be permitted to live in a country which you wronged so much.

On the morning after the election the hall leading to the rooms of the state democratic committee on Washington street was strewn with prohibition tickets and beer and whisky bottles. The combination told eloquently how Jeff and his brethren had "worked" the campaign.

The republican party is not rejected by the country. Its present reverse is due to the vote of the solid south, which remains democratic because it was rebel. In the northern states—that is, in the United States proper—the republican party holds an immense majority. Had the confederate states been counted in our elections during the war, as they now are, the republican party would have been overthrown. Had all the southern states been in the count in 1868 Grant would have been beaten. A mistaken nomination has now broken the solid north and let the solid south in.

And another thing may now be remarked, to wit: The legislature of Oregon, to assemble in January, will elect a senator without particular reference to appointments to Federal offices in the state.

Are you not sorry that you were not a northern democrat of the pro-slavery secession stripe, or a southern democrat of the fire-eating rebel stripe, so you, too, could rejoice in this glorious day?

It is probable that the democratic majority in the next house of representatives will be about twenty-five—a reduction of nearly fifty from the majority in the present house.

In the California legislature the republicans have forty majority on joint ballot. Certainly five, and perhaps all six of their candidates for congress are elected.

And Jefferson Davis, that long-suffering and much misunderstood individual, he, too, has lived to see this day! He feels now like a bigger man than old Grant.

Out of it all there are sundry little consolations. For instance, it is better for the country that the solid south has won this election than to have seen it win the battle of Gettysburg.

Jay Gould now sufficiently indicates which side he was on during the campaign. He is the first man to send congratulations to Cleveland.

Atlanta is painted red for the first time since old Tecumseh Sherman was there in 1864. At last the southern man has his day to rejoice.

PROGRESS AMONG THE INDIANS

The Hon Hiram Price, commissioner of Indian affairs, has just made his annual report to the secretary of the interior. The document is full of important facts and suggestions pertaining to a subject that interests all Americans. One thing is proven beyond any question by Mr Price, and that is the necessity for enlarged appropriations for the various purposes of the Indian bureau. The present democratic congress has a long roll of offenses to answer for, not the least of which is the cutting down of the estimates of the Indian commissioner for the current year. The misfortunes of the Piegans, Blackfeet, and other Indians on the far northern reservations need not be recounted here. Suffice it to say that the entire disappearance of game and the inability of these tribes to support themselves at present by agriculture, must make them dependent for several years to come upon the bounty of the government. The papers have been full of accounts of their suffering this past summer for want of food. Commissioner Price vindicates the bureau, and shows that the neglect of congress to pass the appropriation bill until the end of the session, and the curtailment of the bureau's estimates, are solely responsible for the disgraceful and sad condition of the people on the reservations mentioned. This method of seeking to establish a reputation for economy is quite characteristic of a democratic congress.

There prevails in somewhat vague form, the impression that each Indian receives a handsome annual income from the United States treasury, and that the whole aboriginal race is supported in idleness and luxury at the expense of the tax paying pale faces. On this point Mr Price cites some telling figures. "The Indians actually get," says the commissioner, "of the money belonging to the government to feed and clothe them, only about $7 per annum per capita, or a fraction less than 2 cents a day for each Indian. Each soldier costs the treasury $1000 a year." The soldiers are chiefly employed on the frontier to maintain order in the Indian country. Mr Price most pertinently dwells upon the bad economy of this arrangement. More liberal grants of money for the purpose of teaching and civilizing the Indian would make the costly military establishment unnecessary in a few years. Mr Price insists that the present Indian appropriation is much too small, "if it is expected to transform the Indians from being wild roving nomads, into peaceable, industrious and self-supporting citizens in any reasonable time."

In spite of the embarrassments arising from paucity of funds, the bureau reports a gratifying progress in the direction of civilizing the Indians. "More Indians are living in houses and fewer in tepees than there were one year ago, more are cultivating the soil and fewer following the chase than when I made my last annual report. There are more in the carpenter, blacksmith and other mechanical shops trying to earn an honest living, and fewer at the war dance, scalp dance and sun dance than in October, 1883." The system of Indian police on the reservations and of Indian courts in connection with agencies is accomplishing very satisfactory results in the direction of internal order and good behavior. These courts are proving instrumental in the abolition of some of the most barbarous and pernicious of Indian customs.

The true economy of liberal provision for education is so palpable and the shortsightedness of withholding money for common schools is so universally admitted, that it seems almost incredible that Indian children are growing up in ignorance on many reservations for the sole reason that congress will not appropriate the necessary money. As it is, there is substantial progress reported in the educational work. Compulsory education is having trial in four agencies, and will be extended throughout the Sioux reservations where school houses have been provided. Several hundred more Indian children are studying in industrial, agricultural and mechanical schools than a year ago.

Among the recommendations made by the commissioner is an increased number of agency farmers, better pay for the Indian police, and more liberal compensation for the officers who compose the "courts of Indian offenses." "More liberality in paying Indian agents, and assisting such Indians as show a disposition to help themselves would be true economy." A law prohibiting the sale of arms and ammunition to the Indians is urgently needed. Congress is also asked to increase the penalty for selling liquor to the Indians. The erection of hospitals on such agencies as now have none is shown to be advisable. A large part of the report is devoted to the attempts of such adventurers as Payne to trespass on the Indian Territory, and it is recommended that the law be so amended as to make such offenses punishable by imprisonment as well as by fine.

Mr Price has shown himself to be a most industrious and intelligent official, and his ample knowledge of the Indian question is not to be doubted. It is, therefore, reassuring to know that so competent a witness can give testimony like that contained in the following sentence:

Taken altogether the impartial view of the situation warrants the belief that some time in the near future it is fair to presume that, with the aid of such industrial, mechanical and agricultural schools as are now being carried on, the Indian will be able to care for himself and be no longer a burden but a help to the government.

The Ancient Cities of America.

Tucson, A. T., is an ancient city. Antedating Jamestown and Plymouth, and visited first in 1540 by Coronado, it saw its first European settlers in 1560, and its first missionaries in 1581. But long before the year 1540 there was an Indian village established on the site of the present city, so that the Tucsonians can, if they please, claim an age for their town as great as Santa Feans claim for theirs. For all practical purposes, however, 1540 is a date sufficiently far away, and if Tucson only continues to improve with age, or becomes as good as she is old, much may be expected of the place. Built by the Spaniards, who brought so much religion to the people whom they conquered, San Xavier (San Havier) is to-day one of the largest, as it is one of the best preserved, of all the churches built during the years of the Spanish occupancy of the Southwest. Riding from Tucson for nine miles up the valley of the Santa Cruz river, one has glimpses from time to time through the groves of live oak and muskeet trees of the white walls and graceful towers of the church as they stand clearly outlined against the sky beyond. It was down this valley of the Santa Cruz, which is to-day attracting so much attention as an agricultural section, that Coronado marched on his way from Old Mexico in 1540, and before the advent of this intrepid explorer and ever since, the valley has been inhabited by the Papago Indians, whose adobe houses with thatched roofs are scattered along the road leading to the mission.

Joe Eiter was arrested last evening on a charge of concealing stolen goods.

Mrs. A. A. Foster of Sprague has recently purchased property in this city aggregating in value some $2000.

A deed from the Bertha real estate association conveying lot [illegible] block [illegible] to Mrs. Fanny O [illegible]lander for the consideration of $[illegible] was filed for record yesterday.

The annual dinner of the Portland Cricket club will take place this evening at the St. George hotel. Covers will be laid for forty and the gong will whang at 7:30 sharp.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Oregon Transfer company held a day or two since H. W. Corbett, Henry Failing, George H. Flanders, John Kernan and J. P. Thompson were elected directors for the ensuing year.

A. L. Johnson, a farmer from Washington county, while driving into the city from Hillsboro, Thursday evening, met with an accident at the second bridge on the Canyon road. His horses from some reason became unmanageable and there being no railing to the bridge, the whole outfit went over, falling about 15 feet. Mr Johnson escaped with a few scratches and a coating of mud, and was able to get his team out without serious damage. It is evident that a railing is needed on that bridge.

J. E. Johnson, a farmer from Washington county, while driving into the city from Hillsboro, Thursday evening, met with an accident at the second bridge on the Canyon road. His horse from some reason became unmanageable and there being no railing to the bridge, the whole outfit went over, falling about 18 feet. Mr. Johnson escaped with a few scratches and a coating of mud, and was able to get his team out without serious damage. It is evident that a railing is needed on that bridge.

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

THE DOG AND THE REPORTER.—It is not an uncommon incident in the life of a man to have a dog jump out and bark at him at some unexpected moment. This is an almost every night occurrence with a reporter on this paper after a "day's" work which keeps him up until 3 o'clock in the morning. As he is wending his steps homeward, perhaps running his mind's eye down the vista of time to a point when he will be the editor-in-chief of a great paper and mold public opinion and make and unmake presidents and senators and strike terror into the hearts of dishonest men, and thinking that in a few minutes he will be free from care and can give himself to sweet sleep, and "in a dream as in a fairy bark, roll on and on through the enchanting dark to purple day break" and way past day break, just so that he gets up in time for police court at 1 o'clock—it breaks him up for a minute to have some awful ornery fiste interrupt his meditations with a shrill bark. He resolves that the next night he'll carry a club and give that dog a belt over the head just for luck. And walking on a few steps farther, he considers. "Now, that dog has disturbed me for only a minute. The chances are he has awakened his owner and his owner's family and part of the neighbors." And he changes his resolution and devises a plan by which he can keep the dog on a steady bark for fifteen minutes, until the entire neighborhood is aroused. He is going to put the plan into execution for a week and arouse the neighborhood to such a pitch that the dog, or the owner, or both will be driven out.

DESPERATE MANIAC.—John Anderson, who lived with his brother about six miles back from Carroll's Point, became a raving maniac on last Tuesday night at about 10 o'clock, and he and his brother—both bachelors—being alone, the madman locked the door, and made an assault upon his brother, who, only by severe exertions, saved himself from death. He received some severe bruises and was unable to get away until about 4 o'clock in the morning, when he burst open the door and rushed out into the darkness with one boot on and the other in his hand. A lamp which was hurled after him by his crazy brother came very near knocking him down. He gave the alarm and the neighbors secured and brought him to Kalama, where he was confined in jail over Wednesday night. Thursday morning he appeared all right and Sheriff Smith took him down town, where he was calm until after noon, when, at an unexpected moment, he made an assault on Sheriff Smith, but as help was near he did not succeed in injuring the sheriff more than giving him a swelled jaw. The lunatic imagines he is the Lord, and said the reason he assaulted his brother and the sheriff was that they would not believe, and that he had made them believe. Dr. Moore, of St. Helens, came down Friday and made an examination and pronounced him hopelessly insane, and he was taken to the lunatic asylum at Steilacoom Friday night.

POLICE COURT.—Judge Moreland yesterday sentenced Joe Haggarty, the opium fiend and vag, to pay a fine of $50. This may serve as a warning to some of the other maquereau and opium fiends that a fictitious employment of an hour or two a day does not shield one from the consequences of being a worthless vagrant. An innocent looking Chinese boy was tried on a charge of picking Mrs. Phillippi's pocket of a bunch of keys. From the testimony it would appear that her keys were drawn out of her pocket when she pulled her purse out to put it in an inner pocket for safety, and that they dropped on the sidewalk. The woman picked them up and slapped a Chinese boy who was standing near her in the face, and her valiant husband and his brother-in-law from the east dragged the little wretch off and handed him over to a policeman. When Mrs. Phillippi was asked to select the alleged thief from a crowd of Chinamen in the room, she took a good look and then grabbed a witness in another case who had never heard of her or her keys, and triumphantly dragged him into the arena, to the great amusement of the crowd. The case was taken under advisement.

WANTS A DEED CANCELED.—John Confer commenced suit in the state circuit court yesterday to recover title to lots 1, 2, 5 and 6 in block 69, and the south half of block 16 in Holladay's addition to East Portland. In March, 1876, Mr. Confer being sick and depressed in spirits and expecting not to live long, deeded this property to his children, John, Jacob and Rebecca Confer, reserving the right to possess the property during his life. The property is subject to taxation, and a large amount has already been assessed against it, and plaintiff has not the means of paying it. He cannot sell any of said property on account of the deed he made. The same was never delivered to the defendants, nor were they ever notified of its making. Plaintiff's health is now good, and he is liable to live a number of years yet, notwithstanding he is 84 years old. He therefore prays that such deed be declared ineffectual and void, and be canceled of record.

THE FISH MARKET.—The supply of fish from the Sound has been rather meager of late. Yesterday there was a large lot of what appear to be young salmon about six inches long. It is impossible to say whether they are young salmon or young sea trout, but in either case it seems too bad that so many young fish should be killed. They are very nice eating, however. Halibut are very scarce, only an occasional specimen being received. There is a good supply of clams and porgies and flounders. A lot of squid were received yesterday. They are much esteemed by French and Italians, but to Americans they stand about the same as political crow—they can be eaten, but no one hankers after them.

ROOM FOR THE KINDERGARTEN.—The committee appointed for that purpose have about decided to take the old Couch engine house for the Kindergarten. It is situated near the corner of Thirteenth and G, is in a suitable locality for children whom the institution is designed to reach, and the committee on streets and public property have wisely and generously offered it rent free. Subscriptions to the charity have been larger than expected, and will cover the expense of more than six months; hence an effort will be made to carry it on for one year.

DANGEROUS PRACTICE.—The attention of the parents of boys who cross the First street bridge on their way to school is called to the fact that some of these boys have a very dangerous habit of walking the railing of the aforesaid bridge. A gentleman crossing this structure yesterday was horrified to see a boy walking on the railing in the middle of the bridge, where the least misstep would have sent him down 80 or 100 feet to certain death. Parents of pupils and teachers at the Failing school should take means to put a stop to this dangerous practice.

DID NOT HATCH OUT.—Captain Barrett, of the bark Carrie Winslow, is still at Astoria. Information was sent him yesterday that the ostrich eggs forwarded by him from Montevideo to an East Portland friend failed to hatch out. They were placed under a hen. These eggs are from a rare South American bird, but have never been known to hatch in other countries. They have not before been tried in Oregon climate, and the conclusion is arrived at that nothing can be done with them away from home.

REPLEVINED A HORSE.—A case wherein Samuel George, a rancher of eastern Oregon, sued J. F. Hankins and Frank Russell, of this city, for the possession of a mare and colt, alleged to have been stolen, brought here and sold, came up for trial before Justice Greene and a jury yesterday. Hankins is the well known hackman, and the animals had been put in his stable to board. The jury brought in a verdict restoring the property to George, less $15 board due Hankins, and taxed the costs, amounting to $60, on the plaintiff.

REMOVED.—That letter box on Ash street dock, about which so many items have been written first and last, has been taken down. People would persist in putting letters in it which should have been put in some other box, and the consequence was that they were mislaid and complaints were constantly being made on that account. So to put a stop to this fooling the box has been taken down. People will now put their letters where they will do the most good.

PAY YOUR ASSESSMENTS.—Auditor Durham was busy yesterday in sending out notices to the property holders on Seventh street, calling on them to pay their assessments for the widening of the street at its junction with North Seventh. The matter has been in abeyance for about a year, and now the council has ordered warrants issued for the collections of the assessments. Property owners will do well to attend to this matter at once.

BOUND OVER.—L. A. Johnson, who has been indicted by the grand jury for assault with a dangerous weapon and released on bail, was examined in Justice Davis' court yesterday on a charge of threatening to kill L. Wake. The evidence was deemed sufficient to warrant his being held to answer before the grand jury in the sum of $2000.

PENITENTIARY RECRUITS.—The jury in the case of Ah Keong, charged with larceny of chickens, yesterday returned a verdict of guilty. He was sentenced by Judge Smith to two years in the penitentiary. John Drew, the burglar, who invaded Bill Braden's arsenal and carried off his brace of revolvers was yesterday sent up to serve two years in the penitentiary.

SET DOWN ON.—A little after 1 o'clock this morning a reporter of THE OREGONIAN, while coming from the city jail, heard a horrible noise at the corner of Stark and First streets, which sounded like the last groaning bellows of a dying calf. Calling an officer from the station, they hastened to the spot, and found Policeman Brannan sitting upon the body of a man. The body was not dead, nor Brannan was not holding an inquest, but if the man had not been relieved just as he was he would have been a subject for a jury, as he was breathing out his last gasps under the hydraulic pressure. His name was Johnny Gay and he was an engineer and he was a New York boy, of the last generation, and he was "going to stay by it—and don't you forget it." He had shown fight as Brannan was bringing him to jail drunk and so he was thrown down and "sat down on." He was taken in with the assistance of Policeman Nash, and will be a thinner and wiser man in future.

COMPLETION OF THE SHORT LINE.—On Monday the rails of the O. R. & N. Co. will be joined at Huntington, on Burnt river, with the rails of the Oregon Short Line, completing another railway track to Oregon across the continent. Trains will begin to run through on the 1st of December.

JOSEPH COOK.

The fact that this eloquent orator and profound thinker is not as well known on this coast as he should be, has been demonstrated by the size of the audience that greeted him on his first appearance. However, our citizens are not slow to appreciate merit, and accordingly last night the Y. M. C. A. hall was well filled with one of the finest audiences ever gathered together in our city. The oratorical power and genius of the lecturer has won a measure of success that will ensure for the future the largest audiences. The lecturer gave as the object of his lectures the scattering of the spirit of provincialism. In graphic language the rapid transit of to-day by sea and land was portrayed. The first of the seven modern wonders of the world is the speed of intercommunion among nations. The open secret of history is God's omnipresence. The second of these wonders is the self-reformation of the hermit nations. The history of Japan within the last century was cited as an example. In the shops of Tokio I found as good and thorough a collection of theological works as in the bookstores of San Francisco. Japan has ceased to be a hermit nation. She is our near neighbor and looks our way. On a near and close inspection of China I was favorably impressed. General Grant recently stated that the three finest men he met in his travels were Gladstone, Bismarck and the Chinese prime minister. The Pacific coast stands as a gate to the orient. I am not sure that in the future the Pacific ports will rival the Atlantic.

Through the 240,000,000 of India England is shooting railroads, telegraph, etc. I lectured in all the principal cities, and in English, being well followed and understood by the native audiences. One of their foremost philosophers in my hearing stated that the brightest jewels in the diadem of India belonged not to Queen Victoria but to the Lord Jesus Christ. Christianity has come to India to stay and rule. There is not to-day territory suitable for white colonies that has no claim upon it; the colonial era is coming to an end once for all.

The third modern wonder of the world is the parallel advance of education in democracy. It is only the spot upon our escutcheon that to-day hinders the old nations from at once copying our institutions. A plan of confederation of British colonies is now on foot, and should it be carried out what else will it be but a system similar to that of the United States?

The fourth wonder is the prospective moral confederation among advanced nations. Any great wave of social or religious reform sweeps to-day upon every shore. International arbitration was then discussed and advocated. France, Germany and England are paying five million pounds per week to enable them to be in readiness to cut their neighbors' throats. Arbitration will enable these nations to disband half their armies and sink half their navies.

I am a provisional free trader and conditional protectionist, and not on the fence, either.

The fifth wonder is the triumph of Christianity in our century; not that it has not been a triumph for the last eighteen, but in our century Christianity has gained 2.8 times more than in the previous eighteen. The number of evangelical church members in our country to-day is one in five. Before twenty-five years has passed I am told that it is more than probable that the bible will be in the hands of every inhabitant. There is not an infidel publication to-day that will bear serious investigation and survive.

More important than any political question in the founding of any state is domestic purity. The vulgar infidelity of the day is engaged in breaking up and ruthlessly destroying our homes by circulating infamous literature. Many facts were given. Most infidels are instances of arrested development.

The sixth wonder is "The current fulfilment of literal prophecy." I stand in awe before the fulfillment of biblical prophecy.

The seventh wonder is "The establishment of a scientific supernaturalism." The most persistent attack against Christianity is from infidels, who claim that from the year 33 to 160 no evidence is attainable to the truth of the miracles of Christ. This has been narrowed down to the year 60 in our day. Now we believe certain facts about Washington and always shall. Why? Because the facts are followed by events which are history. Numerous incontrovertible facts with regard to the authenticity of the scriptures were given.

There is not an era in the history of the world that is better authenticated than the first twenty-five years of the Christian era. How do you account for a pure Christian church in pagan Rome in the first century? God's purposes ought to be ours; let us read them.

The last lecture will be delivered this evening. Subject: "Does Death End All?" It is a reply to materialism and is illustrated by physiological diagrams.

MILITARY AND PERSONAL.

Vancouver Independent.

First Lieutenant W. L. Geary, Twelfth infantry, resigned October 15th, promoting Second Lieutenant Millard F. Waltz.

Captain Chas. A. Dempsey, Second infantry, has been granted three months leave of absence by special order from headquarters of the army.

Hospital Steward W. H. H. King is transferred from Fort Canby to Fort Spokane, and Hospital Steward J. C. Blake from Fort Stevens to Fort Canby.

Lieutenant J. E. Runcle, First artillery, reported at department headquarters on the 29th ult., and left on the next day for his station—Fort Canby, W. T.

Invitations have been issued for the marriage of Dr. G. F. Wilson, U. S. A., and Miss Evelyn Elderkin, to take place at St. Luke's church, Vancouver, Thursday, November 20th.

Medical Director J. C. McKee, in Cincinnati met with a painful accident on Oct. 13th, a carriage running over him after he fell from it. His injuries were regarded as serious at the time of the accident.

During the absence of the other aides-de-camp from department headquarters, Lieutenant J. N. Allison, Second cavalry, inspector of rifle practice, has been announced as acting aide-de-camp on the staff of the department commander.

Leave of absence for one month has been granted Major Amos S. Kimball, chief quartermaster of the department. During his absence Captain W. S. Patten, assistant quartermaster, has been designated to conduct the business of the chief quartermaster's office.

Henry W. Gray, who has been clerk in the office of the post quartermaster at Vancouver barracks since the arrival of the Fourteenth infantry in this department, has been transferred to the general service, and is now a clerk in the adjutant general's office at department headquarters.

Colonel George A. H. Blake, retired, died at New York October 27th. Colonel Blake entered the army from Pennsylvania in 1836 as first lieutenant of the Second dragoons, and was all through the Mexican war. He was promoted colonel of the First cavalry in 1862, and retired December 15, 1870.

The last party sent out in search of Bernard, the Fourteenth infantry private lost on Mount Hood, returned Sunday to the barracks, without finding any trace of the missing man, who probably perished in the snow. The report coming from The Dalles that his body had been found has not been confirmed.

YAQUINA BAY NOTES.

NEWPORT, Nov. 4.

The steamer Yaquina sailed to San Francisco at noon to-day.

M. W. Markham, an old pioneer on the bay, died the 3d inst. and was buried to-day.

The tides are unusually high, causing a good deal of commotion among the small boats, as well as damage.

The new paper published at Newport, the Yaquina Mail, gave their first issue to-day. It is an interesting and readable sheet.

Election is past and all is well, Blaine having a majority in this precinct of all votes cast. The prohibition ticket and Butler ticket was a tie.

The matrimonial fever has taken complete hold on the younger portion of our inhabitants. We have had four weddings the last month and a good prospect for twice the number next month. Captain Perry Card and Miss Allie Norton were married last Sunday.

NEARLY A COLLISION.

The British Ship Abeona Run into a Bank to Avoid Colliding with a Collier at Swan Island.

The British ship Abeona, wheat laden, left down river about noon yesterday in charge of river pilot Ferchen, in tow of the E. N. Cooke. The County of Merioneth, wheat laden, in charge of pilot Johnson and towed by the Alice, left down but a short time after. The Abeona had entered the narrow cut just below the Portland flouring mills when the Oregon Improvement Co.'s collier Willamette was sighted coming up and near the lower end of the cut. The Cooke gave a long whistle, which is the understood signal for a vessel coming up stream to stop. This signal was not noticed by the collier, which continued to ascend. Pilot Ferchen immediately saw that a collision was unavoidable unless the Abeona was grounded. He chose the latter alternative, and ran the Abeona into the west bank, the collier passing by safely. A man standing on the mill dock ran back and sang out to Johnson to stop the Merioneth, she being around the bend and not able to see the condition of affairs. Pilot Johnson stopped his ship only in good time to avoid a general piling up. The Abeona slowly swung around athwart the channel, completely blocking it. The barkentine Catherine Sudden, in ballast, was towed past, finding but eight feet of water. Altogether the affair is one that calls for investigation.

There was a narrow escape from general damage. The Abeona commenced lightering cargo as soon as barges could be got alongside. The steamer S. G. Reed was sent down below Swan island to meet the Columbia, and took off her passengers mail and express, landing them at the Ash street dock at 7 P. M. At 8:30 P. M., the tide having risen and a portion of her cargo having been lightered, the Abeona floated. Owing to fog on the river it was not thought that the Columbia could come up till this morning. Captain Holmes, of the collier Willamette, disclaims all blame in the matter of the Abeona going aground. There is some one to blame, however, and it is a rule of the river that descending boats with tows have the right of way.

THE STAGE.

JOSEFFY.—There was even a larger audience last night than on the previous evening to welcome the great artist on his second concert, and we have every reason to be proud of the Portland public, for there are not many cities in the union of the population of this which gives an artist of the stamp of Joseffy such hearty welcome and show such thorough appreciation as was manifested in the two concerts. Of the artist himself we know not what to say, only that he even had a greater success last night than on his first appearance, the programme being more popular, and better known. In the Chopin pieces he was perhaps at his best, that composer's dreamy, melancholy style being particularly well suited to the artist's abilities. Yet, can anything more quaint and delicious be imagined than his rendition of Delibe's Pizzicato and Schumann's Traeumerie? Here, more than ever, he displayed his wonderful command over the piano, and drew from it a language such as has rarely found expression on this instrument. This afternoon he will appear for the last time in the matinee in the following programme, when the regular matinee prices will prevail:

a. Sonata Appassionata ......L. von Bethoven,
1 Allegro assai. Piu Allegro. 2 Andante con Moto,
3 Allegro ma non Troppo. Presto.
b. Two Musical Moments ......Franz Schubert,
No. 1, A Flat. No. 2, A Minor.

2.
a. Menuet ......Luigi Boccherini.
b. Marche Fantastic ......Waldemar Bargiel.
c. Berceuse,
d. Valse, in C Minor. | Fred Chopin.
e. Agitato pianato and Polka, |
a. Spinning Song, from Wagner's Flying Dutchman ......Liszt.

3.
b. Serenade,
c. At the Spring, | ......Joseffy.
d. Souvenir d'Amerique Valses, |

4.
a. Traeumerei ......Robert Schumann.
b. Hungarian Rhapsodie, No. 12 ...Franz Liszt.
c. Serenade ......Schubert.
d. Fantasie: Midsummer Night's Dream ......Liszt.

THE KATE CASTLETON COMPANY.—The return of Miss Castleton to Portland will be hailed with delight by her many friends and admirers who remember her last visit, when she created quite a furor by her rendering of popular songs in a way that no one else on the stage has ever equaled. She comes with her own company of vocalists and comedians, specially selected for their respective parts in her new play, "At Sea," and it is certainly a very strong one, counting among its members Miss Ethel Lynton, one of the very best prima donnas ever on this coast. She has a voice of wonderful sweetness and power, and is well known by many who have seen her in comic opera in San Francisco, always in the leading parts. Mr. Ferdinand Urban, the popular tenor and comedian, is also in the company, the two latter having just joined the company in San Francisco. We may expect a week of genuine amusement, and all should give Miss Castleton a hearty welcome. One of our exchanges has the following:

Although Kate Castleton and company were all at sea from the time they left San Luis Obispo until they reached this port, they did not finish their voyage, and were "All at Sea" at the opera house Thursday evening before a large audience, which was unstinted in its applause from the time the curtain went up, showing the deck of the good ship "Helvetia" until it dropped on the last act. The play, as can be judged by its title, gives room for many pleasant situations, and especially in the second act it gives Miss Castleton an opportunity to sing those songs which have made her so popular. She scored an instant success on her first appearance. W. P. Bishop made a hit, and immediately became a favorite with the audience along with Miss Castleton. Bishop has a rich baritone voice, and it is a treat to listen to his singing. The other members acquitted themselves creditably, and the dialect imitations of Johnny Williams and Ralph Wray pleased the audience. The audience was delighted with the performance.

TIVOLI BENEFIT.—The programme arranged for the benefit of the Tivoli chorus on Sunday night is a large and attractive one and will not fail to draw a large crowd of their old patrons and friends.

INDEPENDENCE, Or., Nov. 6.—Would you please tell in your next issue how many counties there are in the State of California? R.

ONLY ONE SENATOR EDMUNDS.

WESTPORT, Nov. 6.—What State does Senator Edmunds represent in the United States senate? Are there two senators of the name of Edmunds? If so, from what states are they or do they represent? G. W. SHIRLEY.

[Vermont. There is only one U. S. senator named Edmunds.]

THE EAST SIDE.

At the regular meeting of Pioneer engine company last evening Henry Meyer foreman of the company, was nominated for chief engineer of the fire department, receiving twelve votes against nine for James H. Sprague, the present incumbent. The election for chief takes place the fourth Monday in November at the several engine houses between 7 and 9 P. M.

Mr. Smith, who is engaged grading J street above Twelfth, met with an accident yesterday that resulted very fortunately for him. While hauling a load of dirt the horses ran over the embankment there, taking wagon and driver with them. The embankment is about thirty feet high and has an incline of about one foot in four; but the only injury resulting was the breaking of the whiffletree, the horses and driver escaping uninjured.

While W. D. Prettyman, accompanied by his son, was driving along the Base Line road in a buggy Thursday he was run into by a farmer's team, breaking one of his wheels to pieces. The boy saved himself by jumping out, but Mr. Prettyman was dumped into the mud. They both had to foot it home to Mount Tabor. The farmer did not allow the incident to trouble him, but continued his break-neck speed.

A counterpane was stolen from the clothes line at B. F. Kinsley's residence, Fifth street, between L and M, Wednesday night.

Mrs. D. C. Bogart, of Holladay's addition, entertained a large number of her friends at an elegant dinner at her residence yesterday to celebrate the election of Cleveland.

A man is reported to have been held up on the Fourth street bridge Thursday night by two men, who fled upon the victim raising an alarm.

Three sports got into a broad car
A railroad car [illegible] pack of cards
They called [illegible] and there was [illegible]
And then they [illegible] to each other [illegible] cards
For sports [illegible] both good and pure
[illegible]
When railroad trains are running.

They wanted a fourth at a poker hand
Three were they and they were one short
And they asked a stranger if he'd be sport
To try a little game for sport
For strangers there are where men abound
And you'll always find a stranger round
When railroad trains are running.

The stranger didn't know the game
But he was willing to live and learn
To him the cards were all the same
[illegible] first he'd learn
And the sports laughed loud and dealt the pack
And gave him [illegible]
As they will when trains are running.

And then they bet on the poker hand
And fattened the pot to a goodly pile
And they asked the stranger if he would stand
And the stranger [illegible]
And one sport raised the other two
And the stranger [illegible]
When railroad trains are running.

And then in a solemn [illegible] hush
Three sports showed what they held [illegible]

A DAY IN TADOUSAC.

When the head of the shipping firm of Freyteau, Wall et Cie in Montreal sent young Noel as their agent along the lower St Lawrence the other partners grumbled loudly. They were shrewd Americans, Noel a mere lad, Canadian French, gay, crochety, wordy. He had heavy sums to collect, and there was an ugly story afloat that his father had been a professional gambler.

Pierre Noel was now old and imbecile, but his son persisted in taking him with him everywhere, and paid him an exaggerated respect. Wall et Cie grew very uneasy about their money. Blood, they said, would tell at last. But M Freyteau was obstinate in his likings, he would not recall the lad. All they could do was to send the younger Wall to look him up now and then and to take rigid account of his receipts.

It never occurred to Louis Noel that he was suspected. Nothing short of a blow on the face would convince that careless fellow that anybody was his enemy. He made his headquarters at the lonely village of Tadousac for a reason, and he supposed the same reason brought James Wall there.

The two men, one August afternoon, met in the orchard of an old pension behind the village. The wind was frosty and Noel brought a bench out from under the trees into the open sunshine, for a young girl who was with him.

James Wall sat down upon it beside her, crossed his stout legs comfortably, drew out the Quebec paper, and looked at the quotations in lumber. Noel walked away. He could not come near Hester Page to-day. She had dropped a word or two to him last night, a mere nothing when one repeated it, yet very different from the cool, amused criticism with which she met him heretofore. He had repeated the words a thousand times to himself to-day. Could it be——?

He could not speak to her before Wall. He felt as if he must cry out with this sudden madness of hope that sent the blood through his body like a flame. He wandered about irresolutely, climbing a tree for some russet pears for her, and left them lying on the grass, lighted a cigar, smoked furiously, and let it go out in his mouth, then began to sing with a tremendous discordant clatter.

Mr Wall shuddered, then laughed, compassionately, glancing at Miss Page. They were both admirable musicians, and often sang together with that accuracy and neatness of effect which peculiarly marked the words and movements of both.

"These Canadians are restless in body and mind as grasshoppers."

James Wall's thick tones grew complacent and intimate with Miss Page. Were they not Americans? This Noel and all unfortunate foreigners, belonged to the ultima thule outside of the States. She smiled, looked at Louis, then at Wall, then down to the pale blue web she was netting. What with her deliberation, the pale blue net, the creamy gown, fitting close to her neat, rounded figure, and her lusterless brown hair and eyes, she made a center of calm of delicate color which suited the faded hue of the autumn [illegible].

Mr. Wall scanned her over his paper, pursing his thick lips with gusto. He had been calculating her merits and defects for a long time, but his mind was now made up. True, she [illegible] enough to pay her share of the [illegible] brilliant beauty to push them on [illegible] in Montreal. But some indefinite, [illegible] power in the faint-colored calm little woman had conquered him. As much of the [illegible] was not given up to lumber interest, or the worship of James Wall was given to her. He was a poor man, greedy of money, yet he meant to marry this penniless Baptist minister's daughter. Why not tell her so at once?

"Noel," he called "here, Noel!" (It was just as well to let her know their relative positions, and that this scampish fellow, whose infatuation for her was the talk of the village was only the paid servant of the firm.) "I wish you to finish that report. I start for home to-night. By the way, I will take all your collections with me."

Noel did not move.

"Do you hear? See to it at once."

"Chut! Chut! No hurry."

Louis plunged over the low stone wall, looking down the mountain. Below him was the narrow street of Tadousac cut through beetling gray cliffs, the old cottages, perched here and there, each sending out through its steep red or yellow or tinned roof a sleepy drift of smoke. Lights shone through the windows of the little ancient church. The door was open and he could see Grigoeaux, the fat beadle, climbing into his high seat, then came Father Matthieu up the hill, half a dozen children of the inhabitants with their wax-like features and glittering black eyes, tugging at his gown.

At the foot of the hill rolled the silent, fathomless tide of the Saguenay—that mystery of the north, black as the line drawn by death through the live beauty and comfort of the hills and village. Just then the notes of the French horn filled the air with a melancholy sobbing. Louis gave a quick nod of satisfaction. That was his father. He always knew the old man was happy as long as he was filling the world with his melodeous piping. Some young fellows—his comrades—on the pier caught sight of Noel.

"Hi! hi! Louis!" they called.

He shouted back, waving his hat to Pere Matthieu, who laughed and nodded. Two Sisters of Mercy, pacing decorously in their black robes to the church, glanced furtively up and smiled at each other. The whole village knew and liked the merry fellow and the old father of whom he was so fond.

The gate clicked. Wall tired of waiting for him had gone angrily away.

"Thanks to God," said Noel. He hurried toward Hester, then stopped short in a spasm of shame. Who was he? To go to ask her to give herself to him? The best man in the world was not fit to touch her! Look at her sitting there, the sun shining full on her! Her hands went with her work, in and out, in and out. The monotony of motion maddened him. For two years he had followed her faithful as a dog. It had been almost enough to see her, to hear her speak now and then. If he told her now that he loved her, he would risk all this: she would drive him away. Never to see Hester again? Never? If she married Wall? For a moment he could not get his breath—the world [illegible] about him.

Then his blood swelled with sudden triumph. Why he was not a child, he was a man and that was the woman he loved! He went to her, laughing, over a fallen tree, and threw himself breathless on the grass. Hester, [illegible], looked down at his sensitive face and burning eyes.

"I heard you singing, Monsieur Noel," she said after awhile.

"Oh! [illegible]" [illegible] "My father does. I don't know. He is a great musician. [illegible] he would have me to sing to you now."

"No," Hester smiled. "You—you can talk to me instead," she said shyly.

Noel did not answer. He rose slowly and leaning against a tree, looked steadily down to her face. She saw how he trembled, though she did not raise her eyes. The very wind was still. A cricket chirping in the stubble counted off the long minutes. Far away sank and swelled the low chanting in the church. Hester's fingers still went in and out of that wearisome net, but they shook, now—she couldn't see her work. It seemed to her as if all had been already said between them.

"Hester," he broke out at last, "you must have known it a long time? I suppose it seems like mad folly to you. I know! I'm only Louis Noel. I'm a headlong, good-for-nothing fellow! But——" He caught her hand and stroked it passionately in his cold fingers.

Hester glanced up at the pension window. She did not forget to be decorous.

"No, don't speak yet," he cried. "Don't send me away yet! I know the Americans think me flighty—a vaurien. But I can work. I can make you such a happy home here in Tadousac. I know you like Tadousac. Oh, I know all your whims and fancies! I'm a weak little fellow, but I love you so that I could keep trouble away from you as if I were God."

Hester looked at him thoughtfully. She had known for a year that each of these two men would ask her to be his wife, and she knew precisely what answer she would give them, but she was not going to be hurried out of her orderly course.

Louis drew back. "You will not take my love?"

His sudden pallor, his relaxed features, angered her. What was the use, after all, of such wearsome tragic emotions?

"I will see you again," she said, coldly. "We are not alone now. Here is Mr Wall."

Wall stood within the gate. Noel turned and joined him without a word. As the men went out together, a branch of woodbine struck against one of their faces. Miss Page, as soon as she was alone, broke it off and shyly put it to her lips with a bright blush.

"Bring the reports and money here," said Wall, when they reached the house.

"The money," stammered Noel, "it is in a sealed package. Is it necessary to count it?"

Noel's suppressed excitement as he left Hester, startled Wall. He eyed his dazed face now with sudden suspicion.

"Bring me the money!" he said very sharply.

Louis ran up to his chamber. There were steps overhead, then a pause. Ten minutes, half an hour passed. Then the door opened, and he stood on the threshold. He looked shrunken and years older than when he went in.

"The money is gone, Wall," he said.

"The money! Gone? What do you mean?"

"The package. I sealed it yesterday. I locked it in my desk—"

"And it is gone?"

Noel sank on a chair near the door. Wall went up to him. He was a powerfully built man and towered over Louis.

"Bring me that money!" he said.

Noel pushed him away steadily.

"Keep your hands off me. I must think—this means more to me than to you."

Wall drew back. There was a moment's silence.

"It means ruin to you. Look at me, Noel. This will not surprise the firm. They have long suspected you. You cannot pass it off as an accident. Now, listen. If that money is not within my hands in an hour, I must return to Montreal to-night, and make all known. Even if Freyteau will not consent to your arrest, you will be discharged." Then he lowered his voice. "Miss Page will not be likely to marry a penniless vagabond and a—thief."

"What of Miss Page?" said a clear voice behind him.

Louis stood up. Wall turned and faced her, a slow heat of triumph rising in his heavy jaws and half-shut blue eyes. There had been some softening of pity in his tone just now, but he remembered that this man was his rival and in his power. James Wall was not the man to delay using that power for one remorseful moment.

"Monsieur Noel is in difficulty," he said, gravely looking down, and rubbing his well kept nails as though in embarrassment. "His returns to the firm—there is a deficiency of several thousand pounds."

Hester went quickly up to Noel. There was something wholesome and invigorating in her decisive step, in the keen commonsense lightning her brown eyes.

"You can set this right, of course," she said.

"I have not spent the money. It was in my desk yesterday."

She looked at him for a moment, then for the first time in her life laid her hand on his arm.

"Monsieur Noel, you are not yourself! You have been robbed. Why do you stand here? Why do you not make search, arrest the servants?"

Noel avoided her eye. "I will not do that," he said. "They did not take it."

"He does not understand of what you accuse him," she said impatiently to Wall, who laughed contemptuously.

"I do understand. I will search for the money again." He turned to Wall. "The boat will not be in for an hour. Give me that time."

The stupor was shaken off. Something of his usual gusty, awkward vehemence was in his manner as he went out. But when Wall said, "He knows he will not bring the money back," Miss Page secretly felt that he was right. She took up her netting and seated herself at the window.

"We will wait here until the hour is over," she said quietly, and Wall recognized himself as a prisoner. A stronger will than his had resolved on justice to Noel. He could not go out, as he had intended, to publish the theft in Tadousac.

"Unfortunately," he said, "suspicion has been directed to this young man for some time. A charming fellow too. A thousand pities!"

Hester's fingers steadily went in and out of the blue web, but she remained silent.

Noel on the upper floor halted at the door of a chamber next his own. Within the French horn sounded a wailing cry. He stood a minute, drew a long breath of gathered strength, and went in smiling. M Noel, seated by the window, rose quickly to meet him, laying down his instrument carefully. He wore a velvet jacket and cap on his long white hair. Noel took as much fond pride in devising picturesque costumes for his father as a woman would for her baby. His features were sensitive and fine as those of Louis's, but the eyes were shallow and glassy and there was a perpetual deprecating smile on his mouth.

"It's time for our walk, my son," he said, speaking the pure French of the old families of Quebec.

Louis, with a smile still on his face, placed a chair. "We will talk a little first, father." Standing behind him, his hands on his shoulders, he glanced at the clock. Not an hour! Yet if he frightened the old man he could discover nothing. He talked of indifferent matters and then said:

"How did you amuse yourself to-day, sir?"

"With my music, Louis, and I strolled across the mountains."

"With these also," taking from a drawer a pack of greasy cards. M Noel started up pale and trembling as a guilty child.

"They are not mine! They were lent me. I only play a little game of solitaire."

"Why assuredly! Do you ever wager with yourself, sir? One hand against the other?"

"Why, I never tried that!" chuckling. "I wager with Jacques when we play. A trifle—[illegible]"

"And the money you play with? You hide it as you used to do? Here—there where Jacques cannot find it?"

M Noel nodded complacently. "Trust me for that. Nobody will ever find it. Why, there are places among the rocks—"

Louis looked out at the vast stretch of mountain ledge over which his father had wandered that day. The clock ticked faster.

"Father," he said, coming in front of him.

"My son, son! Who has hurt you?" The gentle face was full of wild terror. "What have they done to you? You never looked like that in your life, Louis."

"Never mind. It's all right father, all right," kneeling down before him and soothing him. He thought if he told him the truth surely God would waken some spark of intelligence in the poor dead brain to help him. The hour was nearly over. His strait was desperate.

"There was some money in a package in my desk, father. It is gone. Do you know where it is?"

The tenderness faded out of the blue eyes. They grew by turn perplexed, vacant, then cunning. "Ah, Louis! You want to find out my hiding places to store your money. Va! Va! We old people have our secrets, eh?" clucking with his tongue.

Noel started up. "Oh, for God's sake! You are my father! Be a man again. Come back this once to save me!"

A shadow of comprehension struggled into the vacant face; his life galvanized into a corpse. Then it died out. "You frightened me," he said. "I did not see the money."

Louis was no fool. He saw how he could shelter himself by leaving the crime where it undoubtedly belonged. It would probably be condoned as the act of an imbecile. He threw his arms with a shudder around the old man and reverently kissed the gray head.

"Do not be frightened, father," he said gently, "nothing will harm you."

A moment later Hester, hearing his firm steps without, rose. "You have found it?"

"No."

Noel, all his life, vehement and passionate, stood now quiet and resolute, while Wall swaggered uncertainly.

"You know the consequences, Noel! You are accountable. I can do nothing for you. I shall telegraph the firm from Quebec and return to-morrow."

"The money," said Louis, slowly, "may be forthcoming by that time."

"So late a repentance will hardly save you," sneered Wall. "If it were not for Freyteau, I would order your arrest at once." He turned irresolutely to Miss Page, bowed, and without speaking left the room, going immediately down to the little steamer which lay at the pier.

Hester went to Louis. "You do not defend yourself," she said, with a queer choking in her voice.

"No."

"You did not even say that you were not guilty?"

Their eyes met. There was a long silence. Noel put his hand up to his mouth uncertainly.

"I can say nothing." He turned away.

She stood still, her clear eyes followed him, her unconscious fingers tearing the web she had netted bit by bit. It fell in a heap on the floor. She came to his side with a little rush as Pere Matthieu entered the room.

"I will speak for you," sliding her hand into his arm. "Ah, Father, congratulate us! I have accepted Noel. I must announce our betrothal. It is our custom in the states."

The good father was shocked at her want of decorum. Her cheeks burned, her eyes shone with soft brilliance. "Come, come" she cried, "We may yet be in time to tell the news to our friend, James Wall. It will cheer him on his voyage."

She almost dragged Louis down to the garden which overlooked the pier, on which a little crowd had gathered. He held her back.

"You shall not blast your life for me! Why do you do this?"

"Because I love you," she sobbed.

At that instant Wall, stepping from a little bateau on the deck of the steamer, looked up. He saw her clinging to Noel's arm, started, and hastily drew back, the bateau rocked, overturned, and Wall with the Indian boatman was struggling in the water. The Indian, who swam like a fish, easily gained the land, but Wall was washed a helpless lump under the steamer, and then drifted down into the black, resistless current of the Saguenay.

Hester was a gentle creature, but she certainly did remember at that moment that the drowning man was the only witness against Noel. On the contrary, Louis in an instant was his own self, frantic with excitement, shouting, kicking off his boots.

"Where are you going?" she said, sharply.

"Why, Wall cannot swim," he cried, plunging into the rushing flood. Both men disappeared in the night. The whole village gathered on the pier, crying, swearing, talking at once. Pere Matthieu ordered out boats and went in one himself, which presently brought both men ashore. Louis was conscious and staggered to his feet. They laid Wall's heavy body under the trees and stood about it with their lanterns, while Pere Matthieu drew off his coat and put his ear to his breast.

"He is alive," he said. "Carry him—"

But Hester's keen eye saw what no one else did. She swooped down on the prostrate body like a white bird on its prey. "Stop!" she cried wildly, drawing something from its breast. "Take witness, all of you, that I take this from him. It is a package marked 'Louis Noel. Five thousand pounds.' Oh, Louis! Louis!"

Noel put his arm around her and led her away. Her passionate love filled him with such a new, keen joy that he did not fully understand the meaning of what had happened. When he did he only said humbly: "Then I wronged father. God forgive me! Let us go to him Hester."

He was eager to tell him that the American girl, of whom the old man was so fond, had promised to stay with them in Tadousac and be his wife. There surely was heaven opened.

When James Wall, clothed and in his right mind, entered the pension an hour or two later, he found the three together chattering and laughing. They grew silent as he approached.

"They tell me I owe you my life, Noel," he said hoarsely.

Louis turned away. It hurt him to see the man's humiliation. It did not hurt Hester one whit.

"Here is the money," she said, sweetly, smiling, tapping the package. "Monsieur Noel will himself transmit it to Montreal."

Wall looked into the soft, taunting eyes one breathless moment. "I did it for you, woman," he said, and turned away.

Louis Noel never mentioned Wall's name after that day. But his wife often did, always adding "There was much good in that man after all."

HIS LORDSHIP'S DOG CART.

The Handsome Vehicle Once Used by "Lord Abercrombie" Sold

John J Kennedy, a Broadway, N. Y., tailor, will ride in the dog-cart of the [illegible] "Lord Abercrombie," having purchased it at auction at No 58 West Fifteenth street yesterday morning. The sheriff hung out the red flag in front of John Walker's stables about 11 o'clock, and Auctioneer Walters mounted the seat of the cart and cried:

"What am I offered for this elegant dog-cart of Lord Abercrombie?"

Mr Walker started it at $25. By some mysterious agency the amount was doubled without any one bidding. The auctioneer explained that he saw a man in the crowd wink at him, which meant $50.

"Fifty dollars I am bid for the lord's dog-cart. $50 I am bid. Can I get the two and a half? Remember, gentlemen, that the [illegible] crest and coat of arms go with the cart, and the varnish too. Two and a half am I bid; do I get the five? This must be a bad year for lords. Do I hear the five? Fifty-five I am bid; will you make it seven and a half? Fifty-six is your bid. [illegible] This is the thing [illegible] seven I am bid; at fifty-seven and a half. Where is that [illegible] friend of mine from [illegible]? Won't you [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] working at it. Sixty is bid; sixty two once, sixty two twice. Where are my handsome [illegible] friends? [illegible] one of them. You will look handsome in a dog-cart. Come, bid sixty-three. The crest and coat-of-arms ought to bring $100 alone. At sixty-nine bid can I get seventy. Here you, my friend over there, who lives among all the lords—Lord Vanderbilt and the others—bid something. Why, it's worth $75 to use for a single day. Don't look at me, young man, or I'll charge you a dollar. Seventy-five dollars bid, can I get the two and a half. Seventy-five dollars once, $75 twice, will no one bid the two and a half? It's going against you, can't you bid another?—going, seventy-five twice, seventy-five three times and sold to—what is your name, sir?"

"Kennedy," was the reply, and Auctioneer Walters entered it in his book and descended from the cart. The bidding was not spirited, the only offers being from Mr Walker, Mr Jefferson, Mr Levy, an attorney, who dropped out early. Charles Singes, valet of Lord Abercrombie, and Mr Kennedy. It was a sheriff's sale on account of an execution issued on a judgment obtained July 30 by the valet against his master for four months wages. A tandem team and a pony were to have been sold, but Mr Walker had a lien of $625 on the horses for board, Lord Abercrombie not having paid anything for their feed since June last. He is said to be in Quebec, but was in New York about two weeks ago and was seen by his valet.

"Where is the 'orses," asked a red-faced Englishman, who crowded past the policeman who had been sent to prevent a riot and was holding the dozen spectators in check. "I want ter look at 'em for a minute, for yer see as ow I boarded 'em for the lord down at Sheepshead Bay last summer." Mr Harland, as it proved to be, produced his stable book and identified his tandem team, but said he never saw the pony. He succeeded in getting $35 out of the lord, and he said he would present no further claim.

After the auction the crowd gathered about the valet and he regaled them with stories about Lord Abercrombie. "The lord was broke before his valet," said he, "and I lent him $1, but he paid it back to me. On June 8 he sent me to get a check for $500 cashed at the Central national bank and when I talked about Lord Abercrombie they didn't know what I meant. His name was Walter Adams Mayhew. They told me he had drawn $25,000 from the bank since April, the value of some land he had sold in England, and said that the check I had was not good. When he left here he had a diamond ring that he bought of Joe Coburn for $1000, and other jewelry. He had two lady friends, one at the Ocean house, Coney Island, and one near 145 West Sixteenth street, where he lived. He used to send a check for $100 to the one on West Sixteenth street every other day and once he sent her $2000 worth of jewelry that he bought at Tiffany's. He had the entree of the Union club, for I know he was introduced by Mr Jerome to Berry Wall and [illegible]."

The Russian Dog-Faced Boy.

Philadelphia Times.

Jo-Jo, the Russian dog-faced boy, arrived from New York yesterday. This week he will be exhibited in the Arch street dime museum. This strange creature is about 7 years old, he stands about four feet high and is in all respects like a human being, with the exception of his head, which is exactly like that of a well bred Skye terrier. He has the ordinary characteristics of a playful, lumbering Newfoundland puppy. He is very fond of being petted, and snaps and snarls if annoyed. Jo-Jo has only four teeth, two canines in the upper jaw and two incisors in the lower. He cannot speak distinctly. Jo-Jo's father was very like him, only more so. He was found in the forests of Kostroma, in the middle of Russia. He died three years ago. Jo-Jo himself was born at St. Petersburg. He has visited most of the principal cities in Europe and has picked up something in each, in most places only a word or two. Rooms for Jo-Jo and his attendant have been taken at the Continental hotel.

George I. Seney was not so utterly ruined by the failure of the Metropolitan National bank after all. He is to retain his collection of pictures, for which he paid $800,000.

SAILMAKING A DYING ART.

The Decadence of Ship Building and its Sad Results.

Sailmakers Cannot Find Any New Channels for their Work—Fear that Not One will be Left in Another Century. An Old Salt's Reflections.

New York World.

A grizzled sea captain stood by the Brooklyn pier of the suspension bridge yesterday afternoon and watched with absorbing interest a stately ship being towed down the stream. A World reporter was attracted by the sight of her towering masts and spreading arms and took his stand near the old salt, whose eyes never moved from the receding vessel.

"She's a fine looking craft," said he finally, taking a pipe from his mouth and allowing the smoke to curl over his head as it was forced from his lips with the effort of speaking, "but she won't make many more trips. Her days are about over."

"But she's a new boat, comparatively," said his listener, "she can't be unseaworthy yet."

"Hey, what did you say, young man?" said the old fellow, turning rather bluffly on his neighbor. "Unseaworthy! Naw, she's no coffin yet, she isn't. Why, she's good for years to come and can stand as stiff a blow as the best on 'em. But it isn't that. Sailing vessels are going out of date and it's a sad thing to see. Why, lad, there's only one port for sailing vessels in all the United States, and that ain't New York either," he said quickly, catching the reporter's smile and anticipating that he supposed the metropolis was meant.

"Where is it possible to find a greater port than this on the Atlantic coast?"

"It isn't," was the laconic reply. "I mean San Francisco." The captain continued: "There are no vessels building in this country as compared with years ago. I have seen the industry in its infancy, and I see it now in its old age, and if I live a few years more I shall see it die. In the memory of a good many captains now living a 300-ton ship was a big one. What do you see now? Why, vessels of 2000 and even 2200 tons are common, while every port of size has its ship of 2500 tons, and it isn't classed as one of the world's wonders, either. They are only half in commission however. There ain't any freights, and if a cotton or grain cargo is offered 'round here there's sure to be a steamer sent over from the other side to gobble it. An Englishman told me t'other day there was 200 steamships lying idle in the Thames up around London. Everything's running to steam. They'll feel it soon in San Francisco, and the fact is they have a good many idle sailing ships there already. Yer see, after the Chili-Peruvian war there wasn't any guano shipped and the big fleet that was carrying the stuff to Europe and bringing it here to New York, too had to lay off and wait for something to turn up. But there's nothing doing."

"What'll become of all the sailing craft then?" asked the reporter, curious to know how the old fellow would work out his maritime problem.

"No matter about the ships. They'll make kindling wood or a keg if nothing better. The question is, What's going to become of the thousands of artisans who put them together? The painter, of course, can paint something else and the carpenter can build houses or go on his farm. He'll do better there anyhow, for a ship is all cabinet work now, and there ain't no carpentry about it. But what's to be done with the blacksmith, the calker and the sailmaker?"

"See how sailmaking has fallen off in the last thirty years. It's dying as an art, it is, and there's no hope for it. They used to have apprentices in all the lofts till you couldn't rest. Now you can't find but a handful all told. The journeymen sailmakers are disappearing, and in fifty years there'll be no such thing as an old fashioned sail-loft. I don't like to see it. People never think of it, for they don't know anything of it, really. But it's an art and requires as much skill as to fit a suit of clothes to a man. See that craft over yonder. Do you know how they go to work to rig her with canvas? No? I thought you didn't. Well, it's simple enough when you know how, as Columbus said about standing an egg on end. Yer see when she was building they got the measure of the masts and plans were laid on paper with the dimensions and the sailmaker sat down with his duck and tape and the plans before him, and he put his gores according to the measurements on the plans. Perhaps you thought he spread the duck all over the loft. Not a bit of it. He can make the sails for the biggest ship in a room 12 feet by 6 feet if he chooses, but the loft is handy and allows a good many men to work, and they spread their stuff and have room to walk around it. The journeyman folds his duck back and forth on itself and begins work at one end and goes through a strip at a time. Then he measures up or [illegible] strip, for it comes in pieces of a certain width, you know—and puts in his gores, and so on. Then comes the stitching, and the sail takes shape."

"How long does it require to make the sails of a big ship?"

"Well, they could be got ready in two weeks by putting enough men on to do the stitching."

"Do they ever employ women?"

"Not in this part of the country. They do down in the eastern part of Maine, but that's because the women work cheap. They do the stitching, that's all."

"Do the journeymen wear thimbles?"

"No, they have what they call the palm that protects them, because they can't use their fingers to push the big needles in the stiff canvas. The average time for getting a ship ready is from four to six weeks, and then the work isn't so hard."

"Do the sailmakers have to solicit business as the vessels come in?"

"Some do, but a wise man makes friends with the owners and has regular customers. When a ship reaches here with torn sails a report is made to those who control her and they send around for their favorite sailmaker. There's got to be system in every business and simple ways of doing things."

"You spoke of sailmaking as a dying art. Do you think it will ever cease to be known as a trade?"

"Yes, I do. One hundred years from now there won't be but one sail-maker left. That will be the son of the youngest journeyman now at work, for if they once start in they stick to the trade forever and die with the needle in their hands. To-day the sail makers' union has 300 members here in New York. Ten years ago they had a good many more and thirty years ago there were probably double the number. But the old ones are dying off and nobody wants to become an apprentice to a trade that is not likely to last even a lifetime. I pity the last sail-maker. He'll be like the sailing vessel—a curiosity, a poor thing of a past age. He might get his living in a dime museum, but he'll find little business unless canvas trousers come in fashion and give his art a new channel. Imagine him scanning the papers every day to see where the last sailing vessel is, and speculating on what the chances are of her getting home without any canvas and needing an entire outfit. He'll have a monopoly of the business then, but most of his time will be taken up praying for a storm, and he mustn't pray too earnestly, for he doesn't want one that will destroy the ship, only a little one that will tear her sails. When that last vessel is gone he'll go too, and they'll lay him away in a roll of duck, with a ship under full sail for a monument. Then a second Wendell Phillips will lecture, a few hundred years from now, on 'The Lost Arts' of sail making and sailing. He will tell of peculiar, great lumbering ships that spread their white wings to the winds and depended on favorable breezes to carry them along. Then this audience, who will have come to his lecture in pneumatic tubes or balloons and are accustomed to go to Europe on the elevated road will laugh at the slow age of 1884, when Grover Cleveland was elected president of the United States, and the electric man, the human Leyden jar, James G. Blaine, was exhibited as a nineteenth century wonder."

The old salt sighed and replaced the cold pipe in his mouth. "Yes, sailmaking and sailing will soon be lost arts," he mumbled.

And the passing cable car took up his sad refrain and rattled on towards New York, echoing, "Lost art!" "Lost art!" emphasizing the words with the joggle of each new rail passed over.

"The Saving Remnant" in Syria

N. O. Times-Democrat.

I cannot conscientiously say good-bye to my Arab enemies without making an acknowledgment. Before leaving Syria I encountered a single solitary instance of the extraordinary spirit, which will remain a perpetual green spot in the desert of my Levantine memories. I was riding through a field with Mr Floyd, and being overtaken by thirst, we stopped to get a drink of water from a peasant at work garnering wheat. The water we sucked out of a goat-skin by means of a hollow reed, and it was delicious. I tossed the man half a franc, which he took, bowed politely and said:

"You were quite welcome to the water without paying anything."

At first I staggered under this revelation of unexpected unselfishness. Then a tide of homesick memories swept over my bosom, and I wept. I had almost forgotten that generous courtesy and generosity existed in the world. The circumstance, little and simple though it was, carried me back over seas and deserts to that land where such acts of hospitality are not phenomenal, where, indeed, people sometimes refuse to take money at all for a draught of cold water. As if that in the country where first was proclaimed the blessedness of giving the refreshing beverage of nature in His name, such a circumstance should now be so exceptional as to cause marveling! I do not want to represent the case so totally bereft of the gentler graces that pertain sometimes to occidental humanity, and, therefore, feel that this acknowledgment is due.

LOST HIS IDENTITY.

A Singular Mind Mystery of Which a Man in Denver is the Victim.

Denver News.

A few nights ago an event is known to have transpired in this city which turns out to possess an extraordinary incident. A young man, whose real name is withheld, attempted suicide by morphine. He was in very good circumstances, with a young and beautiful wife and several children, and it seemed hard to assign any reason for the act to those who did not know his history. Under strict promise of secrecy as to names, however, the police got the main facts in the case, and they have at length come under the watchful eye of a News reporter.

Some years ago the young man whose attempt at self-destruction alarmed his family the other evening was one of the parties injured in a great railroad accident in Iowa. Taken to Omaha, he was brought back to life and consciousness, but beyond a satchel marked with the initials, "W C B," there seemed no way of identifying him. No card or other mark of identification was found in either the lining of the bag or in part of the valise. It was to be presumed that the young man would, on regaining consciousness, be able to identify himself, but this did not prove to be the case. On the contrary, he was unable to tell who he was or where he came from.

His railroad ticket had been taken up and his sleeping car ticket had evidently been left in the care of the porter. He was alive, but so far as his past life was concerned he was dead to all practical intents and purposes. In other respects he was bright enough, and as soon as he recovered health went to work as a day laborer, and gradually getting money ahead came to Denver. Fortune favored him here and in other parts of Colorado. Adopting a name of his own selection he grew rich and somehow never seemed to trouble himself in regard to his past life.

He fell in love with a beautiful Denver girl and after a six months' courtship they were married. She bore to him several children. As they grew wealthier and they moved into a better house, and began to entertain people, he happened to meet one day, at one of his little social parties, a man whose face and voice attracted his attention. Soon after the gentleman's visits to his house ceased unaccountably, and the young man rather worried himself over the circumstance, but soon forgot it in the press of other matters.

Some six months ago the young man having a business engagement started for Chicago. Arriving in that city he happened to meet the very man who had called at his house in Denver. The man called on him at his hotel and asked him why he was living in Denver under a false name, telling him his real name and revealing the fact that a young girl to whom the young man had been engaged in the states had recently died broken hearted while watching and waiting for tidings of a lover that came not. His parents too, had both died, and the old farm where he formerly lived was made the subject of much litigation. The young man slowly awoke to what he had been and returned to New York state, where he recovered and put in shape the old homestead, but he felt that his family required his presence west again, and he returned to Denver. But here the memory of his past life returned so vivid and the thought of the changes which his loss of identity had wrought in his life worried him so much that he could scarcely eat or sleep.

But remarkable as has been his experiences, a most remarkable one was to follow. He was recently thrown from his buggy in a runaway accident, and since that time he has lost consciousness of the new life and he was found one night not long ago to have left the city for the east. Detectives were set out on his trail, and he was sent back [illegible] In this city he still denies that his wife or children belong to him and declares that he will go back to his old love who waits for him in the east. Explanations are unavailing and it is feared that the last accident he met with deprived him of reason. His melancholy attempt at suicide strengthens this belief. Some of his physicians, however, believe that if his brain [illegible] tension, is strong enough, an operation may be performed on it which may restore his mental balance. [illegible] mental shock is, however, more to be desired and [illegible] this mysterious case of [illegible] remedy.

A GREAT FRIGHT

A Man's Hair Turns Gray While Clinging to a Bridge

Chicago Herald.

"[illegible] get scared [illegible] for nothing," asked a clerk in a down town store who had just returned from his vacation. "Well I did, and I will tell you about it. Out where my folks live there is a railroad bridge of the old trestle style. It is about forty feet high and crosses a valley out there, being no water under it. When I was a boy I used to walk that bridge day and night, and the other evening I wanted to go across, and started out just as I used to. When I got about half way over I heard a train coming, and seeing that I could not reach the other end, I let myself down under the stringers and hung by my hands as I had done a hundred times when a boy. Somehow my arms are not as strong as they used to be and they ached long before the train came. In my haste I had got into an uncomfortable position before it was necessary. Finally the locomotive struck the bridge and at last went thundering over my head. My hold was weakening every minute and I soon realized that I could not hang on much longer. I believe that train was a mile long. The perspiration fairly streamed from me as I thought of the awful plunge I must soon make. Then my brain reeled and my nerveless fingers slipped from the stringer, and down I went about six inches. They had been filling in the old trestle with earth intending to make an embankment there, and I had not noticed it in the darkness. If you fellows see any gray hair in these auburn locks of mine you will know how they got there."

Literary Vengeance.

We suspect that the posthumous revenge which the dowager Lady Lytton prepared in her autobiography which has just been published in England will fail of its purpose. No one can read the ridiculous letters of Edward Bulwer, and which were written to her and have all been included in the publication, without an irresistible suspicion that the language there used is deliberate and intentional flapdoodle adapted with literary cunning to the vanity and sentimental calibre of a weak woman.

If Sir Edward Bulwer's reputation for sagacity or ordinary good sense, to say nothing of literary dignity, rested upon these letters, he might be dismissed forever as a drivelling idiot. But we are not required to so dispose of him. His work is too voluminous and too enduring to permit of any such hasty conclusion as to his capacity as Lady Lytton demanded.

Doubtless all men of sensibility act and speak, at times, in their amorous intimacy with woman, in a manner that would excite pity and laughter from the world, could it see and hear. But it is morally certain that no man of Mr Bulwer's capacity and intellectual vigor would have done other than adapt himself in his private correspondence with the woman he loved, to her foibles and weaknesses. It is somewhat unreasonable to ask us to suppose that he would posturize as a ninny and willow as a satyr before a woman who commanded dignity and respect.

It is an old adage that a man in love is for the time being what the woman wants him to be. And it is not less true that most men pass through their evanescent moods of amorous idiocy without much mental damage.

Lady Lytton's autobiography may be accepted as another evidence of the oft-asserted axiom that women have no magnanimity. Either Bulwer did all the letter writing, in which case his wife showed the cunning duplicity of a [illegible] adventuress and was incapable of answering him with equal ardor, or she left in his hands letters which, if they were at all reciprocal, would no doubt be equally silly in print at this time.

Had Lord Lytton authorized the publication of such letters he would have been universally condemned. That he did not showed him to have been possessed of certain noble qualities which it would be in vain to look for in a spiteful and revengeful woman.

He who is first to present duty, says Henry Ward Beecher, breaks the [illegible] in the loom and will find the [illegible] which he may have forgotten its cause. A case in point occurs to us. When William Ryder of 87 Jefferson street, Buffalo, N. Y., recently told a reporter that "I had a large abscess on each leg, that kept continually discharging for twenty years. Nothing did me any good except Dr Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cured me." Here is a volume expressed in a few words. Mr Ryder's experience is entitled to our readers' careful consideration.—[illegible] Sun

HUNT'S REMEDY CO., Providence, R. I.

Thousands Hastened to Their Graves
By relying on testimonials written in vivid glowing language of some miraculous cures made by some largely puffed up doctor or patent medicine has hastened thousands to their graves, the readers having almost insane faith that the same miracle will be performed on them that these testimonials mention while the so called medicine is all the time hastening them to their graves. Although we have

Thousands Upon Thousands
Of testimonials of the most wonderful cures, voluntarily sent us, we do not publish them as they do not make the cures. It is our medicine Hop Bitters that makes the cures. It has never failed and never can. We will give reference to any one for any disease similar to their own if desired, or will refer to any neighbor as there is not a neighborhood in the known world but can show its cures by Hop Bitters.

A Losing Joke
A prominent physician of Pittsburg to a lady patient who was complaining of her continued ill health and of his inability to cure her jokingly said "Try Hop Bitters." The lady took it in earnest and used the Bitters from which she obtained permanent health. She now laughs at the doctor for his joke but he is not so well pleased with it as it cost him a good patient.

Fees of Doctors
The fee of doctors at $3 a visit would tax a man for a year and in need of a daily visit over $1000 a year for medical attendance alone. And one single bottle of Hop Bitters taken in time would save the $1000 and all the year's sickness.

Given up by the Doctors
"Is it possible that Mr. Godfrey is up and at work and cured by so simple a remedy?"
"I assure you it is true that he is entirely cured and with nothing but Hop Bitters and only ten days ago his doctors gave him up and said he must die from Kidney and Liver trouble."

None genuine without a bunch of green Hops on the white label. Shun all the vile, poisonous stuff with "Hop" or "Hops" in their name.

GENERAL TRADE IN NEW YORK.

The Shipping List of October 29 says: Uncertainty respecting the future, the somewhat unusual [illegible] displayed by all classes of business men in [illegible] progress of the political canvass, and [illegible] of [illegible] capital and a continuation of rigid [illegible] in every department of trade and [illegible] have been the distinguishing features of [illegible] commercial and financial situation since the [illegible] week opened. This is not another way of [illegible] however that trade continues dull and un[illegible] and the controlling characteristics of [illegible] the same as have been present for [illegible] past. Politics is too [illegible] [illegible] business men in this city that [illegible] has been witnessed in a number of years [illegible] similar report are received from other important trade centers throughout the country, and [illegible] naturally intensifies the prevailing [illegible] [illegible] with respect to the inauguration of [illegible] commercial enterprises and imports of un[illegible] seeking with regards to fresh operations. [illegible] of the most significant indications in the [illegible] situation of financial affairs is the recent [illegible] in foreign exchange and the shipment of [illegible] considerable amounts of gold from Europe hither. [illegible] last week over £400,000 was shipped and [illegible] for her account has been advised by cable [illegible] predict a heavy movement, although [illegible] also shows a [illegible] only moderately [illegible] of one [illegible] [illegible] with the [illegible] [illegible] all risks [illegible] assurance that the decline [illegible] has been due to the [illegible] [illegible] and increased [illegible] of cotton bills [illegible] the [illegible] therefore is likely to [illegible] [illegible] The cotton movement will no doubt increase [illegible] a number of [illegible] exports [illegible] of foreign merchandise [illegible] [illegible] from the time onward the [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] probable smaller [illegible] [illegible] of gold in [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] result of the liquidation [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] which is already [illegible] [illegible] heavy reserves [illegible] [illegible] money [illegible] are now carrying only [illegible] [illegible] of distrust that now so generally prevails [illegible] the fact that these reserves [illegible] [illegible] that in the aggregate money is being [illegible] from active employment [illegible] [illegible] new channels for investment [illegible] a considerable increase in our reserves of gold may restore confidence of those who are over [illegible] and [illegible] the desire to take advantage of an era of [illegible] low prices. One of the chief [illegible] why money is now so abundant and [illegible] employ at profitable rates of interest is [illegible] to the disposition to speculate [illegible] in railway stocks and securities or [illegible] other words because of the rigid [illegible] of the times. Men are afraid now [illegible] [illegible] that under other circumstances scarcely receive a second thought. [illegible] the country and the people are worse [illegible] everything that goes to make [illegible] wealth, but because shrinkage in [illegible] the place of inflation and the [illegible] of security that is thought to be found [illegible]

Mesmerism.

Popular Science Monthly.

I will show you the method of mesmerizing which is, perhaps, on the whole most effective, it is very nearly that described by Braid. It is the method only which I wish to show you. With one hand a bright object, such as this faceted piece of glass, is held thus, eight to twelve inches from the subject, so that there is a considerable convergence of the eyes and rather above the level of the eyes, so that he is obliged to look upward. The subject is told to look steadily at the piece of glass and keep his whole attention fixed upon it. This position is kept up from five to ten minutes. During this time the pupils will probably dilate considerably, often assuming a slight rhythmic contraction and dilation, when this is the case, the free hand is moved slowly from the object toward the eyes. If the subject is sensitive the eyes will usually close with a vibratory motion. In some cases the subject is then unable to open them, and the usual mesmeric phenomena can be obtained. If, when the operator brings his hand near the eyes of the subject, the subject instead of closing them, follows the movements of the fingers, the whole proceeding is repeated, but the subject is told to close his eyes when the fingers are brought near them, but to keep them fixed on the same direction as before, and to continue to think of the object and that only. The operator then for some minutes makes "passes," bringing his warm hands over and close to the face of the subject in one direction. When the subject is inclined to pass into the cataleptic state, an indication of his condition may be obtained by gently raising his arm. If he is beginning to be mesmerized, the arm remains in the position in which it is placed. If the arm falls, the mesmeric state may not infrequently be hastened by telling the subject to keep his arm extended while he is still gazing at the object, or while the passes are being made. And that is the whole of the process. The man thus mesmerized sinks from manhood to a highly complicated piece of machinery. He is a machine which for a time is conscious, and in which ideas can be excited by appropriate stimulation, any one acquainted with the machinery can set it in action.

Bright's Disease is regarded by many as incurable and it is well nigh so, except when opposed with HUNT'S [Kidney and Liver] REMEDY. This old and reliable medicine has special power in this and all other diseases of the kidneys and bladder. It is purely vegetable, and is highly recommended by physicians.

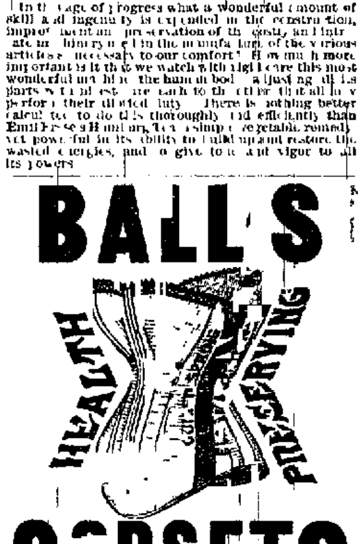
In this age of progress what a wonderful amount of skill and ingenuity is expended in the construction, improvement and preservation of the costly and intricate machinery used in the manufacture of the various articles necessary to our comfort! How much more important is it that we watch with vigilant care this most wonderful machine the human body, adjusting all its parts with [illegible] care each to the other that all may perform their allotted duty. There is nothing better calculated to do this thoroughly and efficiently than Emil Frese's Hamburg Tea, a simple vegetable remedy, yet powerful in its ability to build up and restore the wasted energies, and to give tone and vigor to all its powers.



The ONLY CORSET made that can be returned by its purchaser after three weeks wear if not found PERFECTLY SATISFACTORY in every respect, and its price refunded by seller. Made in a variety of styles and prices. Sold by first-class dealers everywhere. Beware of worthless imitations. None genuine unless it has Ball's name on the box.
CHICAGO CORSET CO., Chicago, Ill.

Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a fine blood depurent, a rational cathartic and a superb anti-bilious specific. It rallies the failing energies of the debilitated and the kidneys, premature decay. Fever and ague, bilious remittent, dyspepsia and bowel complaint are among the evils which it entirely removes. In tropical countries where the liver and bowels are organs most unfavorably affected by the combined influence of climate, diet and water, it is a very necessary safeguard. For sale by all druggists and dealers generally.

DR. PAUL W. BRENAN

IS THE MOST SUCCESSFUL PHYSICIAN ON the Pacific coast in the treatment of all Chronic and Difficult Diseases of the Sexual Organs.

I will guarantee to cure any form of disease of the generative organs or private disease if the patient follows his advice and treatment.

He has become an expert in the treatment of disease, weakness and derangement of the reproductive organs of both male and female, including diseases caused by the FOLLIES OF YOUTH, such as Spermatorrhœa, or Seminal Weakness, or Loss of Perfect Vitality. Nearly two-thirds of all the chronic diseases spring either directly or indirectly from some derangement of the sexual system and yet this subject is neglected by a majority of the Medical Profession.

Persons afflicted by any form of sexual disease or weakness often delay in calling upon the proper physician in time from a sense of modesty and sometimes from ignorance, and permit those diseases to exist until their constitution becomes corrupted, their organization broken down and the hope of future happiness blighted until death becomes a welcome messenger to carry them out of their miserable existence. Everything strictly confidential under all circumstances. Lost manhood perfectly restored.

Catarrh, Bronchitis, Throat Diseases, Skin Diseases, Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint and all diseases of the Eye and Ear, Stomach and Bladder, he can cure without fail, if they are curable and if not, he will tell you so.

Consultation Free, and a list of printed questions sent to those living at a distance who cannot consult him personally. Enclose postage stamp for list.

Office—Nos 132 and 134 Third street, corner of Alder, opposite Masonic Hall.

Office Hours—10 to 12 A. M., 2 to 5 and 7 to 8 P. M.

All letters of professional business must be addressed to Dr. Paul M. Brennan & Co., Portland, Or.

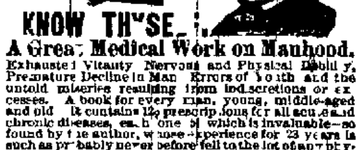
THE SCIENCE OF LIFE. ONLY $1
BY MAIL POST-PAID.



KNOW THYSELF.

A Great Medical Work on Manhood.
Exhausted Vitality, Nervous and Physical Debility, Premature Decline in Man, Errors of Youth, and the untold miseries resulting from indiscretions or excesses. A book for every man, young, middle-aged and old. It contains 125 prescriptions for all acute and chronic diseases, each one of which is invaluable—so found by the author, whose experience for 23 years is such as probably never before fell to the lot of any physician. 300 pages, bound in beautiful French muslin, embossed covers, full gilt, guaranteed to be a finer work in every sense—mechanical, literary and professional—than any other work sold in this country for $2.50, or the money will be refunded in every instance. Price only $1.00 by mail, post-paid. Illustrative sample six cents. Send now. Gold medal awarded the author by the National Medical Association, to the officers of which he refers.
THE SCIENCE OF LIFE should be read by the young for instruction and by the afflicted for relief. It will benefit all.—London Lancet.
There is no member of society to whom THE SCIENCE OF LIFE will not be useful, whether youth, parent, guardian, instructor or clergyman.—Argonaut.
Address the Peabody Medical Institute, or Dr. W. H. Parker, No. 4 Bulfinch street, Boston, Mass., who may be consulted on all diseases requiring skill and experience. Chronic and obstinate diseases that have baffled the skill of all other physicians a specialty. Such treated successfully without an instance of failure. Mention this paper.

HEAL THYSELF

This BELT or Regenerator is made expressly for the cure of derangements of the generative organs. There is no mistake about this instrument, the continuous stream of ELECTRICITY permeating through the parts must restore them to healthy action. Do not confound this with Electric Belts advertised to cure all ills from head to toe. It is for the ONE specific purpose.
For circulars giving full information, address Cheever Electric Belt Co., 103 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

EAST PORTLAND COUNCIL

A Row on the G Street Improvement Muddle Vote of Thanks to Retiring Recorder—Seventh Street to be Opened and Extended Another Loan Contemplated

A special meeting of the common council of East Portland occurred last evening Mayor Sanders presiding and all members present

Minutes of previous meetings were read and approved

The following is a summary of the business transacted

PETITIONS

From property owners asking for the laying of crosswalks on Fifth street on the south side of K and the north side of S streets referred to the committee on streets

From Thomas Cully by Atkinson & Wakefield agents, asking permission to construct a stairway to cellar from the sidewalk on south side of building at the corner of Fourth and J streets referred to committee on streets.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

From committee on streets, with certificates of street commissioner and city surveyor attached, certifying to work done on J street by Thomas E. Turnbull, C F Spore and Mrs S Easton, and Tenth street by J W Wilson reports adopted, and warrants ordered drawn for the several claims

REPORTS OF OFFICERS

The quarterly report of city treasurer and annual report of auditor and clerk (which appear elsewhere) were read and referred to the committee on accounts and current expenses

The city attorney made a verbal report concerning that part of G street remaining unimproved between Water and Second streets His report was to the effect that the improvement could not be made under the old ordinance as the time within which it was to have been completed had elapsed and it would be good cause to resist the payment of the assessment therefor The improvement however, could be provided for by a supplementary ordinance, which would not give adjacent property owners the privilege of remonstrating thereto With regard to the action of property-owners on that portion of the street improved, he stated they had no more right to urge the execution of the improvement neglected than any other citizen would have, the only persons having a legal right to compel the enforcement of the ordinance providing for the improvement being the adjacent property owners, who are liable for its cost

The city attorney also reported that, in the suit concerning the Fifth-street bridge, the circuit court had refused a motion to strike out that part of his answer that made it incumbent on plaintiffs to prove the bridge was good and substantial

The Dead Alive.

Medical Report

If most people are afraid of anything it is of being buried alive That cases do happen that it is very difficult for the experienced physician to determine whether a person is really or but apparently dead without first having recourse to means which while they would at once settle the dispute, would place the life of it still existed, in jeopardy, may be judged from the fact that the French academy some ten or fifteen years ago, offered a prize of 10,000 francs for the discovery of some means by which even the inexperienced can at once determine whether in a given case death has ensued or not A physician obtained the prize. He had discovered that the following well known phenomenon exists If the hand of the suspected person is held toward the candle or other artificial light, with the fingers stretched, and one touching the other and one looks through the spaces between the fingers toward the light, there appears a scarlet red color where the fingers touch each other due to the still circulating fluid blood, as it shows itself through the transparent, not yet congested tissues, but when life is extinct this phenomenon at once ceases. The most extensive and thorough trials established the truth of this observation, and the prize was awarded to its discoverer

When electricity or rather its application in medicine, came in vogue it was first thought that it would be a means of deciding whether a person was dead or not This assumption was based upon the fact of electro-muscular contraction But experience soon proved that from one to three hours after death had taken place and in some cases where rigidity but slowly ensues for a still longer period, the muscles of the dead individual respond as well to the electric stimulus as those of the living being

Dr Max Buch now publishes a modification of the above, and what promises to be a reliable and scientific proof of death, for thus far no scientific test existed

While in the living the temperature of the surface over a muscle in the act of or immediately after contraction decidedly increases, this increase is utterly wanting in the dead, and even during the time (one-half to three hours) in which after death the muscle still retains its contractability Having placed, therefore, a surface thermometer on the skin and having waited until the temperature has continued at one and the same hight for about five minutes, the muscle just beneath the bulb of the thermometer is made to contract by electric irritation If then the column of mercury does not rapidly ascend we have the most definite proof that life is extinct in the body while if the temperature increasing it is just as certain that there is still life Under normal conditions the skin for a considerable distance increases by several degrees in temperature if in the muscle below is caused a powerful electrical contraction and this phenomenon is also observed in paralyzed limbs while in the dead deserves the production of heat in muscle formation, has forever ceased

After the Play

NEW YORK LETTER.

A Juvenile Actress Anxious to Paint the Town Red

Abram S Hewitt's Little Brown Jug A Novel Crank Lawyer—A Newspaper Scene The Love of Betting among Women

Broadway is never without curiosities for the curious A walk of a mile in that cosmopolitan thoroughfare is sure to bring its reward to anybody who likes to see odd things A bride in miniature has for a week been one of the exhibits She was 12 years old and small for her age She had a childish face, innocent in its expression, and quaint by reason of the mature millinery and hairdressing which framed it according to the latest fashions for adults Her garments, too were suitable to a figure much longer in its measure by both inches and durance time than her own People gazed at her in perplexity, and usually concluded that she was a dwarfish woman However, I made no error in instantly identifying her as a child No faces on the stage so fix themselves in my memory of juveniles, because pity and foreboding aroused in me at sight of them and I recognized this audacious youngster as Margaret Ferrier whom I had seen acting at Daly's, Wallack's and the Madison Square She was a prodigy and she proved apt in acquiring the views as well as the graces of theatrical life behind the scenes "What are you doing?" an agent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children asked her, "I am painting the town red," she jocosely replied The dreadful fact was that she had broken away from all control, and was spending the wages of her last engagement quixotously She is now going to a reformatory

HEWITT'S LITTLE BROWN JUG

Various, indeed, are our methods in that pursuit of happiness which the constitution professes to guarantee Congressman Abram S Hewitt, son-in-law of the late Peter Cooper, wealthy iron maker energetic politician, was seen in Broadway with an earthen jar under his arm It looked like the sort of an article in which candied ginger root is imported from China being white ware with figures of blue on it, and common enough in seeming quality Hewitt was minded with considerable dignity of person and manner, with no trace of triviality in either "I'm glad to see that you're not too proud to carry home your own groceries when you take the notion," said a friend who fell in with him "Groceries!" Hewitt exclaimed, "do you think this is a ginger jar Bless you, I just paid $250 for that thing, with no contents at all It is good for the price too" He is a collector of porcelains, and owns a collection in which single pieces are valued at $1000 each This is his hobby in amusement

SOME NEWSPAPER EXPERIENCES.

There is one particularly great lawyer in New York He is great that is to say in devising schemes for getting into the papers. If most of them fail it is not their fault nor his He entered a city editor's room and mysteriously whispered as follows "I am retained on the most remarkable case on record in the annals of litigation Nothing like it ever happened before or will ever happen again I am averse to publicity, and don't like to see my name in the papers but I have a sincere regard for you personally, and besides I think the matter ought to be given to the world Therefore I conquer my delicate professional qualms and relate the particulars to you There was in Brooklyn a rich widow who read a matrimonial advertisement, in which a man in Savannah represented himself to be a seeker for a spouse She answered, and a short sharp correspondence ensued Photographs were exchanged That of the man showed a face quite remarkable for its beauty of features, and, as he said he was six feet in height, weighed two hundred pounds and was as straight as an arrow, the widow had no reason to doubt that he was a very Apollo He forwarded certificates of good character, he wrote in a glowing, intelligent manner, and he confessed with great frankness that he was poor Well, the widow accepted him 'unsight and unseen,' as the boys say when they trade knives blindly Not only were their troths plighted without meeting, but they were also married apart. The wedding was held with the parties separated by hundreds of miles of telegraph wire at either end of which stood the lovers while the words of the ceremony were flashed by electricity Now that was a legal union in the eyes of the law, so far as the use of the telegraph was concerned But there was fraud which, as I shall maintain for my client, the widow vitiates the contract. When the alleged husband presented himself at her residence in Brooklyn, she saw to her horror and dismay that he was a negro His features were the true Caucasian ones shown in the photograph, but his color was a dark brown She is suing to be judicially declared unmarried—and you might mention, in writing out the matter, that I am retained as her counsel, because she deemed it essential to employ the very best talent in such an unusual case "Oh, your name shall appear wherever the story does," the editor blandly responded "Good morning" You will not doubt my ability to censure that editor for suppressing the case when I tell you that I have been formally constituted a newspaper reporter Seeing an advertisement which said that reporters were wanted in every town and city in the land, I wrote for particulars to the address given which was Columbus, O and in return got a strictly confidential circular which informed me that I could become a reporter for a named periodical, that the whole of New York city would be my exclusive territory and that the duties consisted in sending a "brief report of the crops and country, or a short article, not oftener than once a month" I was not kept in suspense while inquiries as to my fitness for the dread responsibility were made My appointment and credentials were enclosed There was a neatly beveled card with printing on it in red ink writing in black and a formidable seal in blue It said that the bearer was the duly authorized reporter of that paper in New York city and that "any favors shown him will be appreciated" It warned everybody that its potency lay particularly in the signature of the managing editor and the seal on the back It bore my name beautifully penned It was altogether a thing of striking beauty The circular told me that I would find this card "of considerable value" There was another point on which the reckless appointer of reporters insisted He coupled the intellectual pursuit of reporting with the mercenary one of getting subscriptions for his journal on commission and the horrid suspicion crept into my mind that my services in the former capacity would not be appreciated unless they were intimately associated with the latter Indeed, the circular wound up with the black-lettered words "We shall expect to hear from you soon with some subscriptions and a report"

BETTING AT THE RACES

The love of taking the chances is strong in the breast of the New Yorker, be that bosom covered by masculine coat or the corsage of femininity There is a state law positively forbidding all bets on horse races or anything else, but on the Jerome Park course the other day I saw an inspector of police—a handsome, gray-haired old man in full uniform—acting as arbiter in a dispute over a card wager A negro had picked up the ticket, which represented five dollars risked on the horse which turned out to be the winner, but when he presented it to get the twenty five which it won, he was clutched by the loser of it, who dragged him out to show him to the crowd as a thief The commotion brought the police to the spot, and Inspector Dilks was appealed to by the darkey for protection The official decision was that he might be displayed as a culprit. Leonard Jerome, the millionaire after whom the park is named, was there on the occasion "Oh, yes we're breaking the law every race day," he said, in talking about the betting features of the place, "and if we didn't there wouldn't be any racing at all. Ladies, gentlemen, gamblers, blacklegs—almost everybody who comes here—derive pleasure from the contests, as a rule, solely by betting on them Abolish the gambling and you abolish horse racing" Adjoining the grand stand is a spacious flooring with a canvas roof hanging over it Around the outer edges of this space are forty-seven small raised platforms. Each displays on a neat signboard the name of a person or firm engaged in the business of book-making, which is the system of betting which the authorities have agreed to tolerate in this neighborhood on race tracks only The contents of every enclosure is singularly like the rest, and consist of two or three clerks who take in money, pay some of it out again, and issue and receive tickets. On a little projection at the front stands the "shouter" He is usually a partner in the concern, unless that makes it likely he is to be unconscious, in which case a presentable substitute is set forth It is essential that the talker shall not look like a thief, for if he does the betting men will pass him by for a more trustworthy person with whom to leave their money At his side is a small blackboard on which he writes, and from time to time alters the terms upon which he is willing to bet against every horse in the race He has a loud voice and is glib in crying his offers

The forty-seven "shouters" make a tremendous din, equal to the same number of auction sales going on at once and the excited movement of the crowd which they encourage contemplates a scene of novel loveliness. There is a rush to the enclosure instantly after each race, and in a jiffy the holders of winning cards form in lines in front of the various paying clerks It is said that as much as a hundred thousand dollars is often risked in the aggregate on a single race The persons waiting in a line are curiously mixed. At the head of one which I looked at was a negro stable boy, jubilant over the winning of two dollars Next to him was Pierre Lorillard, Jr, a sprig of New York society The rags of the one rubbed the broadcloth of the other The third was a uniformed messenger, such as are employed to carry tickets and money between the book makers and the women in the grand stand and there is no impropriety in telling that he was to collect fifty dollars won by Kate Claxton the actress since she made no privacy of it Do decorous women bet openly on races in New York? They do indeed and frivolity of character does not seem to be at all essential to the keen enjoyment of the gambling, though a certain degree of giddiness helps the congruity A grim-visaged, spectacled old maiden, studious of the race-card as of a prayer-book and as precise with the messenger as though sedately matching a sample of silk in a dry-goods store was one of the figures that commanded my attention She permitted no race to be run without the risk of a few dollars on it

THE GERMAN NAVY

The Tremendous Power of Torpedo Boats and Torpedoes

Berlin Letter

Considering the keen interest felt at present in naval matters, the following account of torpedo boats and torpedo shooting in the German navy may interest many of your readers It is from the Vossische Zeitung In no previous year have the experiments with torpedo boats and in torpedo shooting assumed such dimensions in the German navy as in the late naval maneuvers Not only were all the ironclads provided with torpedo shooting apparatus but a special torpedo boat division was formed which joined the squadron at the end of July, another experimental division being added later for the testing of the new torpedo boats. This year's experience has enhanced the favorable opinion of the value of the submarine weapon for the protection of the German coast. The idea of putting one or two torpedo boats on board every large ironclad seems to have been abandoned It was found preferable to make these boats larger and more seaworthy and to attach them to the ironclad squadron as a floating appendix In distant expeditions, in which torpedo boats could not be dispensed with the boats would have to be sent on special transport ships This year's maneuvers have confirmed the conviction that by a single blow from a torpedo Even on bright moonlight nights and with keen vigilance no ship is safe within reach of a hostile coast plentifully supplied with torpedo boats, especially if at anchor Even in motion the blockading ships will not be safe for the torpedo boats can follow them, and will recognize their position by the lights which the enemy, if he sail in squadron, will not be able to dispense with A stricken ship even if water-tight compartments becomes hors de combat for she becomes motionless No strengthening of her armor such as Admiral Symonds recommends in the English navy can hinder this As far as one can see at present, there are no means of securing even the mightiest battle ships which modern science has built against the annihilative effect of a surprisal by torpedo boats. Watch boats have been tried surrounding the ships at a distance of 400 meters, but experience has shown that even on moonlight nights, and the crews from their sleep, they do not suffice to secure the threatened ship Just as little has the idea of drawing a submarine guard of wire nets round resting ships yielded practically useful results, while this fence will always entail the disadvantage that if the ships are attacked they cannot move, and are consequently

RENDERED ALMOST DEFENSELESS

The boats themselves are difficult to hit, and have in torpedo shooting the advantage over big ships that it is easy to give them the direction which they must have if the torpedo is to hit They can be used with effect, however, only when they can surprise the enemy under the veil of night or fog or powder smoke, or by darting out from a hidden place on the coast. As to the torpedo itself experiments with different kinds have clearly proved that the German navy alone possesses

THE MOST DEATH-DEALING TORPEDOES

The German navy uses a torpedo invented by a captain of the Austrian navy The secret of the invention was bought by the German admiralty for 150,000 marks ($37,500) and then the further perfecting of the weapon was taken in hand by the navy itself It has now attained singular perfection, and is one of the wonders of modern times For non-experts it is always a puzzle how the fish torpedo can be steered under water Being a kind of under-ship, able to move both horizontally and vertically its steering apparatus is duplex The apparatus which keeps its course horizontal is not uncommon, and does not differ in principle from the helm of a ship The mechanism, on the other hand, which keeps it at the desired depth, is automatic In the details of its construction lie the importance and the main secret of the German torpedo

An Island of Pretty Women

Boston Times

The Channel islands, and particularly Jersey, possess much of interest to the stranger, but the crowning glory of Jersey is the beauty of her women For general comeliness they would readily be awarded a prize in any competition of feminine grace Rare, creamy complexions that would put the bloom of the peach to blush, figures made graceful and sinewy by bodily toil, with rather strongly cut features eyes like sloes and lustrous dark hair, the girls met on the streets of St Helier's seem to the stranger the personification of womanly independence, beauty and maidenly reserve, The soft white mists that wrap the island every night from sundown to sunrise gives them carnation cheeks The toil that brings with it the active, healthy body, is due to causes which will enlist on the side of these women the sympathies of true manhood It is because of the woeful dearth of men in Jersey that the women to all the work Where you meet one man in these tortuous streets of St Helier's you meet ten women Out among the green farms this disproportion of the sexes is even more painfully apparent. The heavy ungainly carts on the country roads, are, almost without exception, driven by women, and handsome women, too Groups of cherry-cheeked girls may be seen in wayside orchards, some picking apples from the trees, others straining at the rude cider presses. The little fields, with their luxurious growth of turnips, cabbages and rutabagas, all are tended by women, while the blooming flowers in the house-yard show in their rich variety the evidence of woman's care and attention None but women are to be seen in the big public market of St Helier's—women buying and women selling What men you see are either too young, or too old and decrepit boys who have not started out in life, or old sea captains who have come home to end their days, smelling of salt and full of reminiscences of stormy voyages to Buenos Ayres, to Australia, or through the Chinese seas

Red Cloud's Speech

St Nicholas for October

Red Cloud, the well-known Sioux chief, visited the government school for Indians at Carlisle, Pa, and addressed the scholars in his own language A prize of three dollars was offered for the best translation of this speech We give a portion of the successful report, made by Luther Standing Bear

"You seem like my grandchildren and now I went pass through the shops and saw what you can be done. I saw the shoemaker, harness-maker, tailor, carpenter, tinner, blacksmiths, and they all doing well Here you see I wear a boots which is you make it I was surprise that the blacksmith doing very good Also the girls can washing clothes and sewing Also I went pass through the schoolrooms and I saw some of you can write very fast, and read and I was glad. Now, this is the thing what we send you here for, to learn white men's way There is two roads, one is good and one is what we call devil road Another thing is, you know, if who do nothing just put his hand on his back and lie down, so any dime not come to in his pocket itself so you must do something with your hands Now you must not homesick any but you must try to be good and happier"

Excerpts from Emerson's Skepticism is unbelief in cause and effect The way to mend the bad world is to create the right world Men talk as if victory were something fortunate Work is victory To make our word or act sublime, we must make it real The genius of life is friendly to the noble, and in the dark brings them friends from far If ever here was a good man, be certain there was another, and will be more How it comes to us in silent hours that truth is our only armor in all passages of life and death

"MRS TOODLES" DEAD

The History of a Philadelphia Woman's Long and Lonely Life—Buying Curios for which She had no Earthly Use

Philadelphia Times

After eighty-one years of active life Miss Sarah Simpson is dead She succumbed at last—not to any disease—but to old age Sarah Simpson's bent figure and hoary locks have been familiar to the habitues of Thomas and Black's auction rooms for more than a quarter of a century, and for a score of years she has been known among the furniture car drivers and others about the auction rooms as "Mrs Toodles."

During all the years she has listened to the knocking down to the highest bidder of everything from a flat-iron to a magnificent wardrobe, she has been a daily visitor to the auction rooms and has probably witnessed the selling out of more families of low and high degree than any other person in the city, or probably in America. Every article offered at auction made her acquaintance before sale day came Hundreds of old easy chairs have been tried by her experienced mode of testing an article's worth. Countless mirrors with chalk-mark numbers on them have reflected the pinched features and the snowwhite curls of Sarah Simpson, spinster.

It was because she bid in so many bits of odd furniture and what not that she gained the nickname of "Mrs Toodles" Like the original of that name, so well known and so intimately associated in the minds of theater-goers of a dozen years with John Sleeper Clark and Mrs Chapman who played "Toodles" a thousand times or more, Sarah Simpson bought whatever she considered a bargain, whether or not she had any use for the article Indeed, as a lone spinster a female hermit in a big city, she had little use for very little aside from the furniture and knickknacks which graced her modest little home on Clifton street, where for fifty-one years with her own hands she turned the key in the lock on the door that shut out from her the noisy, busy world.

She was at peace with all persons She seldom smiled When her face grew sunny it was after she had bought some quaint old heirloom for a song Day in and day out she was to be seen walking with feeble step toward the auction rooms Once there nothing escaped her eye Every yard of carpet had to stand the test of rubbing through her fingers Wardrobe doors swung open that she might inspect the interior Bed springs were borne down by her bony hands to test their durability Everything passed under her sharp scrutiny She sold in stock to anyone who wished to buy to

A little over half a century ago Sarah Simpson and her only sister left their home at No 11 [illegible] Terrace, Kensington, West London, England, to come to America Her sister met an American in London After a short acquaintance they were married and the three started for this country. The sisters had been well blessed in this world's goods by the death of their father who was a prominent East India merchant When they arrived in this country they came directly to this city Miss Sarah Simpson insisted on living alone Two years after her arrival both her sister and the brother-in-law died She inherited her sister's little fortune, which coupled with her own legacy left her in comfortable circumstances

Miss Simpson would buy an expensive suite of furniture with the thought of what she would do with it if it was knocked down to her The auctioneers, knowing her well paid but little attention to her bids unless they were made on some trifle that was sure to go for a mere song One she bought in two suits of parlor furniture in one morning, and when she was asked where she wanted it sent she had forgotten that she had become the owner She paid for the furniture, however and had it resold at the next auction sale

Sarah Simpson has relatives living in London who will in all probability inherit her little fortune, which is supposed to amount to nearly fifty thousand dollars She had a few friends in this city, who kept a watchful eye upon her although they seldom intruded upon the secluded life she led

Her little museum will be removed to one of the auction stores she frequented for so many years where the odds and ends of a quarter of a century's accumulation in the auction rooms of this city will be sold in the course of a month The body will be embalmed and sent by steamer to London and thence to Woking cemetery ten miles out of London on the Southwestern railway

A MAN FRIGHTENED [illegible]DER

The Witness of the Crime Reveals It after Fifty Years

[illegible]

The writer then a junior in a firm in London of which he is now the head came to Penzance in September, 1834, to arrange terms among local tin smelters He left Penzance one evening to visit a friend in St Just, which is about six miles from Penzance On the way there, in a lonely part of the road, he met two men, when he heard one say "That's him," while he other asserted "No, it's not" They again faced each other, when the two men said they had taken him for another person Almost immediately a man approached from the direction of St Just and the writer called his attention to the suspicious character of the two men The man who had been a mining agent laughed at his fears and went on his way He had only proceeded about a couple of hundred yards when he was seized with nervous tremors His legs refused to support him and he fell in the middle of the road but thought it better not to stay there, and so proceeded on hands and knees across the road, scrambled up a small bank, and found himself upon a common He dragged himself to a heather covered strip between two clumps of furze and threw himself at length closed his eyes After a little time he looked around and the moonlight revealed to him a newly made mound Hearing two shots fired he crouched and watched, and he saw two men just after bearing the body of a third man

To quiet his fear

Once more a thrill of horror ran through me On they came toward the newly made grave almost touching my feet as they moved past Then they turned to the right and threw the body into the pit The corpse in the grave the two men began to fill it up They had not lowered the earth and many hollows when one of them discovered me They rushed upon me and demanded what I was doing there I explained, but all to no purpose "The same pit will do for him" Yes, I'll do him "Ill cut his throat" "Stop, I'll load my pistol again Don't leave any marks of blood about push him into the pit first and cut his throat afterward" These were the horrible threats, accompanied by frightful imprecations, which greeted me Said one of the men to the other again "We have decided to

BURY YOU ALIVE

Strip off your clothes It's hardly worth while burying that good suit of clothes of yours it will do for one of us" I pleaded my youth my accidental and unpremeditated presence, my newly made wife and crying child, and this at last seemed to touch the hearts of the brutes "Well," said one "we will spare your life on condition that you swear as you hope for heaven and the salvation of you wife child and friends—you shall swear it too, on the point of this knife, and the muzzle of this pistol—that what you have seen this night you will never speak of or divulge to any human being for a space of fifty years from this date when we shall all be as this—at the same time kicking into the grave a clod of light colored clayey soil. I did swear most solemnly I bought my life in that lonely heath of west Penwith I have kept my promise It is a little over fifty years I was then 2[illegible] years of age so you see I am an old man now These men were middle-aged—from 4[illegible] 50—at the time"

On his revisiting the spot, he writes

"As I approached the fatal spot the road cut seemed entirely unaltered I solemnly believe that I crept through the very gap in the low hedge of earth and still protects the croft that I stood between the selfsame clumps of furze which for nearly fifty years very nearly my deathbed—and peep-hole to the murderers had the result of their accursed crime and knelt on the undisturbed grave where their victim's ashes are now mere dust After half a century I knelt again, not to implore mercy of man, as I did then but to God lest unwittingly I have sinned in keeping an extorted pledge and to save myself from harm, have reluctantly shielded heinous criminals I did not at the time hear of any person connected with the district being missed, nor have I ever learned anything that will help to throw light on the name of the victim or the motive for the murder."

A CLEVER FEMALE THIEF CAUGHT

How Ladylike Mrs. Dowd Managed to Live Luxuriously

N Y World

"She's the sharpest woman I ever struck She's got the nerve of a hog," said Detective Sergeant Cosgrove yesterday, referring to Mrs Mary Ann Dowd, whom he arrested yesterday in Le Boutillier Bros' store in Twenty-third street Mrs. Dowd, alias Mrs Dillion and Mrs Smith, confesses to 43 years of age She declares herself to be a cook Forty ladies are willing to swear that Mrs. Dowd has stolen their pocket books and hand-bags in different retail stores in the city A week ago the wife of Councilor Martin was in Stern Brothers store in West Twenty-third street when her portemonnaie containing $101, was snatched from her. She reported her loss to Inspector Byrnes and Detectives Cosgrove and Mangin were detailed to catch the thief. Yesterday they saw Mrs. Dowd go into Macy's The famous "bag grabber" is of middle hight and stout build She has dark hair, a fresh complexion and flashing steel gray eyes which were behind heavy, gold rimmed glasses. Her attire was simple, but rich and tasteful and she carried a velvet bag In Macy's she made two attempts to rob a lady, but failing, left the place followed by the officers She went to Le Boutillier Brothers' store and sat on a little revolving stool beside one of the shoppers. Cosgrove approached her and asked in a low tone

"What are you doing here, Mary? Why don't you work some other place?"

Mrs Dowd rose and the gray eyes glittered with anger as she replied

"Sir, I have not the honor of your acquaintance and I don't know why you insult me in this way Take yourself off before I call one of the firm and have you put out"

"That's good, but it won't work," rejoined the detective, "You'd better come quietly along with us"

"I don't know who you are nor what you want of me"

In this strain she went on but finally went with the officers She was taken to headquarters, where Mrs Martin identified her On the prisoner's person was found a fine gold watch with the number carefully scratched out In an ingeniously concealed pocket of her underskirt were bills amounting to $210 A fine breastpin which she stole in Tiffany's some time ago glistened at her throat. Originally the stones had been a diamond a sapphire and a pearl Mrs. Dowd had had the diamond removed and a ruby substituted

She came to America eight years ago, and attended Moody and Sankey's meetings in the Madison Square garden These she was discovered by Detective Thompson picking a lady's pocket. For this she served two years in Sing Sing and on her release went to Providence. There for a crime she was locked up again, and she languished in prison two years more At the expiration of her term she turned her gold-rimmed glasses westward and visited St Louis and Chicago She had not been long in this city Mrs Dowd always works alone and confines her talent to bag grabbing Her operations have been greatly aided by her respectable appearance and her perfect self-possession

The London Lancet says that after waiting the subject of cholera threatened the French Academy of Medicine has not produced a single notion of scientific value or practical utility and adds that none of their theories can bear the test of investigation or criticism

PORK PACKING IN CHICAGO

How the Grunting Swine are Turned Into Bonanzas into Salt Meat—A Great Industry

Chicago Letter Oct 31

Not long since your correspondent spent an afternoon among the great packing houses at the Union Stock yards, and observed the process of slaughtering and packing the vast number of hogs and cattle that are here prepared for food Every one who has ever spent any time in the country is familiar with the annual butchering day of the farmer If the farmer purposes to slaughter a beef critter, or two or three hogs, the time of the event is looked forward to as one of the most important days of his year's work His wife makes every preparation for a busy day and the farmer calls in two or three of his neighbors, and considers the day well spent if the work is finished by sundown To one familiar with this primitive fashion of transforming the animals of the field into food for the table, the process of slaughtering and packing, as seen at the stock yards, is wonderful The business of killing and preparing meat for the market has been reduced to a science, and the most improved and humane methods have been introduced The hogs intended for immediate slaughter are collected in a large yard whence they are driven up an inclined plane, which is used to the upper floor where they are wanted Here the unsuspecting animals are met by a man with a chain in his hand To one end of the chain is a spring clasp which he deftly fastens on to one of the porker's hind legs a stationary engine to which the chain is attached is started, and before the brute knows that he is in danger he is swinging in the air and traveling rapidly toward the scalding vat, making the air resonant with his dissatisfied squeals But before reaching the scalding vat he passes the sticker, who stands ready with his huge knife, and with one plunge lets out the life of the monarch of the western fields After being allowed to bleed for a few seconds the body is passed over into the scalding vat, into which it is dropped from the chain Here it is turned over a few times, then by the hind machinery at the bottom of the vat is lifted up to a bench, and by a moving belt conveyed to the scraping machine which is the next in order This machine is constructed much after

THE FASHION OF A CORN SHELLER

A roll revolving wheel with flexible scrapers on its outer edge are so placed and ground as to be certain to strike the surface of the hog on every side at the same time Snout first the hog enters the machine, passes rapidly through and comes out at the other end as smooth and devoid of hair as the head of the old gentleman in the front row at the ballet Men with sharp knives stand ready, and if any part of the hog has not been thoroughly scraped, the hair is quickly removed with their knives Here the head is also cut off and rapidly dissected The hog is again attached to the pulley running on an iron track overhead and passed quickly along to another skillful workman, who, with two or three strokes of a sharp knife completely disembowels the animal, hurling the inward parts over to another gang of workmen for cleansing, while the body of the animal is for a few seconds drenched by a stream of cold water from a hose pipe He is then run off on the elevated railway to the cooling room Here the process of killing and dressing is completed, the time occupied in the whole process being on an average about four minutes The men who perform this most important labor in this process are the sticker and the disemboweler, and they must be very skillful men Their labor is difficult and disagreeable but their wages are good Very rarely do they miss their aim, but they must be men of nerve and strength From morning till night a steady procession of swinging hogs, dead or dying, is kept passing through the rooms on the elevated railway and no blockades can be allowed Every moment is occupied There is no heavy work anywhere about the entire process Machinery takes the place of human labor wherever possible, and the remainder of the work is quickly performed by nimble fingers This is the manner in which the hogs are slaughtered in the greatest packing houses of the world Something of a difference between this and the farmer's annual "butchering day"

TALK OF THE DAY

Among the signs of a hard winter is one in which the Indians place the utmost confidence When the hornets' nests are suspended from trees high in the air it is a sign of a mild winter when they are on the ground the reverse may be looked for They are all on the ground this year—Philadelphia Record

A remarkable novelty is the Jewish colony in Jerusalem, now numbering some 15,000 of the peculiar people It is suggested, however that the prospect of gain rather than sentiment draws thither the descendants of those who lived there two thousand years ago, the ancient city having yearly acquired greater favor among tourists lately London Tit Bits

PROMINENT PEOPLE

An English society journal prints the extraordinary and altogether improbable story that Oscar Wilde made $50,000 in New York city by suggesting to shoddy society people as to the esthetic interior decorations of their houses, receiving in some cases $500 for such service

Miss Kate Field has made the first public trial of her new lecture, "The Mormon Monster," in the little Massachusetts town Newton Center, and is emboldened to promise to give it in Boston some time this week, and if Boston survives it she will take it to New York.

Baron Tennyson alleges as an excuse for the delay in publishing his "Becket" that he has been bored with more than one thousand poems on "Gordon in the Soudan," sent to him by poetlings all over England, with a request that he would read, revise and return the productions.
